Two Oxen Consumed by Hungry Politicians, Ball Game Is Enjoyed and McGuire Beats Silva in the Three-Mile Run

THE Democratic City Committee held a warmed-over barbecue at Caledonian Grove yesterday and more than six thousand dyed-in-the-wool Democrats were there.

The barbecue was a holdover from two weeks ago, when a deluge drove the Democratic spellbinders to Faneuil Hall and caused the meat of two fat oxen to be distributed among the charitable institutions of the city.

Yesterday there were more oxen, more spellbinders and better weather. Governor Foss and all the candidates for the State ticket were there, with several Congressmen past and present, the Mayor and Congressman George O'Shaunessy of Rhode Island.

Who is O'Shaunessy? Why, he is the man who was asked to speak three minutes at Faneuil Hall two weeks ago and delivered an oration lasting thirty-five, while the Mayor sat too enthralled to stop him. That's how he got elected to substitute for Governor Harmon yesterday.

Considering the fact that reciprocity was handed a black eye in the Canadian elections, it was a very cheerful gathering, and Governor Foss's explanation that the policy of the Republican party in not revising the tariff was responsible for the rejection of reciprocity was received with acclamations.

Started at 10 O'Clock.

The barbecue started at 10 a. m., but the speaking did not begin until 3 in the afternoon. Until about 2 o'clock it looked as if the affair was going to be a front and Chairman Joe Maynard of the City Committee had a worried look when he told the reporters there were "8,000 present, but wait scattered about the grove."

Along about 2 the cohorts arrived. Wards 8, 17 and 19 being represented by stalwart phalanxes. The orchestra down in the dance hall began to grind out waltzes, the "hit the nigger in the head" enterprises, and the "ring the canes" and "throw the disk" devices all began to do business.

For some reason or other the ladies did not come in large numbers and this compelled the gentlemen in the dance hall to dance together, which they did, demonstrating that it is possible to dance, wear derbies over one ear, and smoke long cigars at the same time.

Over on the diamond a ball game began between City Hall and the State House. Street Commissioner Jimmy Gallivan, who used to play on Harvard, capitained City Hall and they had a "finger" pitcher in the person of Tom Fitzgerald, the mayor's son, whose curves were batted rather freely by the State House men. The legislators, however, had four runners on their team, and as usual it was the ringers who did the heavy work.

The feature of the game was the striking out of Commissioner Gallivan by "finger" pitcher Jim Higgins. After taking a gloss of water Gallivan remarked:

"What do' yer know about that umpire? He called a third strike on me and the ball hit the ground four feet in front of the base."

"That's what they all say," said Congressman James M. Curley and the crowd laughed.

Three-Mile Run Big Event.

The big sporting event was the three-mile run. There was a large field but only two good runners, Joseph Silva, a scratch man and H. F. McGuire of North Attleboro, who had a big handicap. They quickly lapped the rest of the gang and ran neck and neck until the home stretch was reached when McGuire opened up a wide gap and won easily.

During the three-mile run the band

Wickersham Defines Position On Trusts

Expresses the Hope That Illegal Combines Will Voluntarily Reorganize.

BRETTON WOODS, N. H., Sept. 23.—Replying to inquiries concerning the authenticity of a reported interview with its correspondent, published in a leading New York newspaper, Attorney-General Wickersham this evening made this statement:

"The purported interview is a summary of two conversations which I neither understood nor intended to be for publication. The report contains some inaccuracies; for instances, I did not state that the United States Steel Corporation was a combination in violation of the law, nor did I state that the men under indictment in the Beef Trust cases in Chicago would go to prison, if I had my way. There are also other inaccuracies. It is not the intention of the department of justice to bring indiscriminate prosecutions, nor is it its intention to resort to criminal proceedings except where the evidence at its disposal indicates wilful and deliberate violation of law and the suppression of competitive conditions by oppression and unfair or other illegal methods.

It is hoped that monopolistic combinations which are in illegal restraint interstate trade and commerce will voluntarily reorganize and establish competitive conditions without awaiting prosecution.

PARNELL'S SISTER DROWNS.

Inquest Reveals Identity of Woman Victim at Ilfracombe.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—An inquest held to-day at Ilfracombe, in the county of Devon, disclosed the identity of the body of the woman who was drowned while bathing in a rough sea as Catherine Anna Parnell, a sister of the late Charles Stewart Parnell, the great Irish leader. A peculiar coincidence is that on Sunday the unveiling exercises of the Parnell monument in Dublin are to take place. John E. Redmond, the Irish Nationalist leader, will preside.

AUTOS FOR ANDERSON.

Five Machines Shipped to Belgium for Boston Diplomat.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—One of the passengers who sailed on the Finland today was Bernard J. Foye, chauffeur for Lars Anderson, United States minister to Belgium.

He took five automobiles to be used by the minister after he takes up his home at the American legation in Brussells.

Mr. Anderson is said to have more than twenty machines in operation in this country. Besides his residence in Boston, he maintains a home in Washington.

HARVARD AIR MEET LOSS.

Net Deficit Is Now Figured at $10,000.

It is estimated that the net loss on the Harvard aviation meet at Squantum this month is $10,000 and that the fifteen subscribers who guaranteed $1,000 each will not have to pay more than two-thirds of that amount. The loss this year was one third or one-half of that sustained in 1910. These figures are announced by the Boston News Bureau. Once attendance at the meet was only one-third of that at the first one.

REBELS BADLY BEATEN.

Spanish Inflict Crushing Defeat on Tribesmen.

GIBRALTAR, Sept. 23.—Spanish soldiers in Morocco have inflicted a crushing defeat upon rebellious tribesmen. In a battle near Tauiarit between Moors and an expeditionary force of Spanish troops the former were defeated with enormous loss of life, according to dispatches received here. The Spanish and forty soldiers were wounded.

HOLLAND LINER ASHORE.

HE REDUCED 57 POUNDS.

New Method of Flesh Reduction Proves Astonishingly Successful.

The truth of the claim made by Hon. H. T. Stetler, of Uniontown, Pa., that he reduced his weight by 57 pounds in an incredibly short time has been fully established.

The facts are as proven by a careful investigation, that Stetler received, at his own request, on forty days' trial, from Prof. R. O. Hume, of No. 17 West 20th street, New York, a simple, invisible device, weighing less than one ounce, which when worn as directed, aids the invisible fresh relaxer, thereby, entirely without drugging, medicines and exercising. The simple little device, as with other prominent men and women, were gratified and astonished. It is said that the offer to send those outfits on 40 days' free trial has been extended for a time.

IRISH PLAYERS WIN MERITED APPLAUSE

BRILLIANT FIRST NIGHT

Triple Bill Characteristic of Erin With Its Smiles Mixed With Tears.

By C. O'CONNELL GALVIN.

THE genius of true acting was seen last night at the new Plymouth Theatre when the Irish players thrilled a great audience by their splendid production of three of their plays. Those who went to see those actors expected much. No one was seen that spoke disappointment when the last curtain came down.

More than this, no face was seen that did not wear an expression of keen delight and warm appreciation. Mr. Yeats and his associates got a welcome by which they will remember Boston long after they have left America and are back once more at their work in Ireland. As they would say themselves, "they will remember it for many a day."

Not a seat, scarcely a foot of standing room, was vacant in the handsome theatre. It was an audience worth scrutiny and study. Culture and fashion were there and all social orders of women and men filled the floor and the galleries. The whole setting was appropriate, a fine audience, a comfortable and artistic house opening its doors for the first time and the inaugural presentation in America of a stage style which, in many of its features, marks a new departure in domestic drama.

A New School of Play.

There were some in the audience last night who will need education to this new school of Irish play. Some of those burst into most unfitting laughter at the most critical of moments, threatening to ruin some splendid passages. But disapproval of this merriment came so promptly from the rest of the house that it was properly nipped in the bud.

Two of the plays, "The Shadow of the Glen," a one act piece by the late J. M. Synge and "The Birthright," written in two acts by T. C. Murray, are filled with scenes of strong emotion and leave the spectators in most serious mind when they are over.

There are flashes of humor and of wit, to be sure, as in every play that breathes of Ireland. But the sombre and the tragic predominate and sombre and even rather than merry ones prevail when the lights go up and one is rather slow to look at his neighbor.

Too much emphasis cannot be laid on the fact that these players' greatest charm is their naturalness. No one who knows the rural life of Ireland can fail to recognize the domestic scenes and personages seen at the Plymouth as types he knew in every hamlet of his acquaintance.

Real Peasant Life.

It is the first time the non-Irish public has been given a glimpse of real peasant life as it is lived in Ireland day by day, and the presentation was none the more worthy or complete because sufficiently and impressive of culture which has graded the Boucicault school finds no place though Heaven, in the work of these latest of Ireland's dramatists.

Passion, there is, plenty of it, deep and surging and the border line of tragedy is passed with grim frequency. And there is no mawkishness and, above all, forced pose never desecrates. In both the "Shadow of the Glen," and in "The Birthright" the spectator who knows his Ireland, forgets the theatre and for the time being, finds himself watching scenes that are indeed as real and true as any he has seen himself in many scores of places.

Epic and ear both are charmed and satisfied by these players. Their tones of speech, low and sweet as music, are followed with delight, and everything is said so simply it is in no case to remember that the lines they speak are not their own expressions, but the spoken thoughts of others they have learned by rote.

High Standard of Drama.

Yeats and Lady Gregory and Synge and Murray have set up a new standard of Irish play, and now that the public knows it, it will never be lowered or cast aside. The day of the Donny Mannos and the Corn the Shanaghans little ceremony such cultcd and discriminating public will never know them again. In this, the Yeats school scores a signal triumph.

The plays seen last night will be produced again to-morrow evening. Crowded houses will be the rule for the next eight while this company stays in Boston.

Before the opening of "The Shadow of the Glen," a pleasant little ceremony took place when Mayor Fitzgerald, in behalf of the citizens of Boston, spoke eloquent words of welcome to the gifted authors and players, and predicted for them a most successful stay here. The Mayor's speech was frequently applauded by enthusiastic house.

Enthusiastic was the welcome given to William Butler Yeats as he came forward to acknowledge Mayor Fitzgerald's remarks.

NORTH END HOTEL VICTIM IDENTIFIED

The young woman who was found dead in a room in the Grand View hotel on Atlantic avenue yesterday, was identified late last night as Laura Chamberlain, thirty years old, of No. 81 Everett street, Allston, and married. The identification was made more positive by Miss Frances Parks, after seven different persons were taken to the North Grand street morgue by the police to look at the body.

Clues furnished the police by the person who identified the victim and by a hunchback girl who was found at Deer Island were immediately followed up by the police who were searching all day yesterday and last night for a strange man who met with Mrs. Chamberlain to the Grand View hotel late Friday night and registered as Mr. and Mrs. George Smith, Troy, N. Y.

The police are hopeful of making an arrest in very few hours. Associate Medical Examiner Waters last night performed an autopsy at the morgue and found that the woman had been "choked to death."

Last night the police interviewed girls in the North and West ends of the city, one of this number they found today who volunteered to go to the morgue to see if they recognized the murdered woman as anyone they had seen before.

That the woman was strangled to death was proved by wounds the medical examiner found on her body. Finger marks were discovered on the throat. A further examination showed that the windpipe had been ruptured, and the condition of the lungs indicated that death was due to strangulation.

Dr. Waters also found evidences of alcohol in the stomach. From this fact the police thought the woman must have been drinking heavily. Their theory was that the wounds on the temple, contusions on the face and a cut on the lip were the result of a struggle between the woman and her assailant, with his clutch upon her throat.

The man for whom the police are looking appeared at the Atlantic avenue hotel Friday night. Harriet Keeley, night clerk at the hotel, described the man as being 5 feet, 8 inches tall, weighing 170 pounds and being about thirty years old. He was smooth shaven, with rather dark complexion and wore a new blue suit, but no hat. He wore a gold ring with a red stone.

The Grand View hotel is located at No. 207 Atlantic avenue, corner of India street. The body was found by a chambermaid, who noticed the door of the room was unlocked. Entering, she saw the woman's body, fully dressed, on the side of the bed. The body was taken to the North Grove street morgue to await identification.

ONE DEAD IN AUTO CRASH AT MARLBORO

MARLBORO, Sept. 23.—Patrick Sullivan of No. 57 Alton place, Roxbury, and Frank Downs of Walk Hill Avenue, Mattapan, suffered fractured skulls, Downs dying at midnight, Harry Nelson's right arm was broken, and Mrs. Sullivan and Mrs. Downs were badly shaken up, when the automobile in which they were riding along the Boston road was struck by another auto, thrown across a tree and wrecked. The other auto, in which were a man and a woman, speeded away.

The wrecked car belongs to Mr. Downs. With his wife and daughter, Mrs. and Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan, he was on his way to Marlboro. Near the Wayside Inn, another car, coming from behind at high speed, attempted to pass. The other auto caught the left hub of Mr. Sullivan's car and it was thrown against a tree at the side of the road.

Frank Billings of the Marlboro garage, with two autos and a wrecking car, hurried to the scene and rushed the injured to the Marlboro Hospital, where Mr. Downs and Mr. Sullivan were put on the danger-one list. Besides a fractured skull, Mr. Sullivan is badly cut about the head. Nelson's right arm was broken and his left hand badly cut.

Author of Letter Which Played Such an Important Part in the Trial of Mrs. Dodge in New Hampshire Admits Her Identity to a Reporter for the AMERICAN and Reproduces the Document

THE person who wrote the mysterious letter in the Dodge murder case in Vermont—a letter that was believed to have been written by Mrs. Florence M. Dodge, convicted of the murder of William A. Heath and sentenced to serve from four to six years in state prison—was Mrs. Mary Jane Strumbert, of No. 211 Harvard street, Cambridge.

This startling development came yesterday at Weston where the selectmen were gathered to see if they could pay out the $2500 reward that had been offered for the capture of the murderer of Mabel Page.

When Howard Hodgett, Mrs. Dodge's attorney, was told in St. Johnsbury, last night of the confession of the woman, he said that he would come to Boston next week and make an investigation of the case. It was thought that the discovery of the writer of the letter might reopen Mrs. Dodge's case.

Charles L. Tucker was convicted of the atrocious murder of Mabel Page and suffered death in the electric chair.

It was hinted that a mysterious man or woman saw Tucker leave the Page house on the day of the crime. But at the trial no such evidence was introduced. Within the past few days it was said that a woman would appear before the Weston selectmen and claim the reward because she had seen Tucker leave the Page house on the day the young woman met her fate.

One of the nine claimants for the reward yesterday was Mrs. Strumbert—an entirely new figure in the Tucker case. She said that she saw Tucker commit the crime "through the spirit." This did not seem to make much of an impression on the selectmen, and they adjourned the hearing indefinitely without deciding who was entitled to the money.

HOW THE DISCOVERY WAS MADE.

As it happened, the reporter who was But when the AMERICAN reporter began a conversation with the woman she AMERICAN was the same one who covered the Dodge hearing for the AMERICAN. This reporter got to talking with Mrs. Strumbert. Although she had told her name to the selectmen it signified nothing in particular to them nor to the newspaper men present.

"Although my name is Mary Jane Strumbert, I am better known as M. J. S." These initials struck a chord of memory in the reporter's mind. He recalled the letter that proved the sensation in the Dodge case and which was the big card of the prosecution, the allegation being that Mrs. Dodge wrote it herself.

The mysterious anonymous letter introduced as evidence in the Dodge case was as follows:

December 27, 1910.

"The man who Shot Mr. Heath fail with heavy dark hare and wore a cap. Had words in a Shop over money.

After Shooting, went in too the seller for a few minutes the went over a fance and turned down beside the fance.

M. J. S.

When the reporter was talking yesterday to Mrs. Strumbert, he remarked after the conversation the initials "M. J. S." that he recalled a mysterious letter in a murder case of recent date.

Admits Writing Letter.

"Was it the Dodge case?" asked the woman.

"It was," replied the reporter.

"Well," said the reporter, "it was believed up at the trial at Guildhall that this mysterious letter had a lot to do with the conviction of Mrs. Dodge, and if you wrote it the fact ought to be known. It might help to get her out, if she is innocent."

"Well, I wrote to the judge, said Mrs. Strumbert, and told him not to use it against her.

"The judge probably doubted your story because you wouldn't give your name. Will you write for me a copy of the letter as you wrote it at that time?"

"Well," she said finally, "I'll do it." At this time the reporter and Mrs. Strumbert were in front of the Kendall Green Railroad Station on the B. & M. The reporter handed the woman some newspaper copy paper and a lead pencil, and she sat down on a bench and wrote the following:

"The man that killed Mr. Heath was a tall, dark, slight man, wore a cap and hid in the house after the shooting.

Went into the cellar, then went out and hid under a fence, had a quarrel over money.

M. J. S.

Original Letter Comparer.

When the reporter brought the copy of the alleged mysterious letter to the Boston AMERICAN last night, it was compared with a fac-simile of the genuine mysterious letter that figured in the Dodge case. The writing was so familiar, even to the eyes of a person who is not familiar with various handwritings, that it was apparent that the writer was telling the truth when she confessed that she was the writer of the fateful message.

When Mrs. Strumbert finally consented to talk about the Dodge case, she said:

"I hunted up the Dodge case, found it out, in my own way, all about it. Then I wrote to Attorney General Pargent and described the murder. It was in Brookline at the time. I was boarding some at Harvard street. The letter was written December 27. When I saw in the paper later that the letter was not used against Mrs. Dodge, I sent a special delivery letter to Judge Hall telling him the facts, and later telephoned to him. I answered the phone case, signed.

I telephoned to the court house direct. I said to Judge Hall that I had not then use that letter against Mrs. Dodge, for I wrote it.

He asked my name, but I refused to give it. I only intimated in my letter cases so often that I am afraid if they found out my name they would kill me. I told Judge Hall if he didn't believe me, he could find out the identification in Guildhall. He said they also had received letters from men, but laughter case signed. He said he was glad I wrote.

"I also write a letter during the trial to Mrs. Dodge's daughter, Mrs. Bell, telling her that there had been a man in the house who did the shooting. I have never heard from that letter.

Explains the Dodge Case.

"I know just how the Dodge murder happened. Mr. Heath enjoyed this man. They had a quarrel over money and I could see the man holding some money in his hand and shaking it. Mrs. Dodge, at the close of a personal interview, and familiar with various handwritings, that it was apparent that the writer was telling the truth when she confessed that she was the writer of the fateful message.

"At the Dodge house that day the man crept in through the kitchen window to the cellar. Then he slipped into the front hall. Mr. Heath was sitting in the door of the hall, while Mr. Heath was painting. Then he slipped out and hid behind the fences until there was a chance to get away.

RODGERS TELLS OF PROGRESS IN FLIGHT

By CAL. P. RODGERS.

HORNELL, N. Y., Sept. 23.—I am going to stop figuring on a day's run. I've been promising myself every night for three days that I would get the $50,000 prize offered by William Randolph Hearst for a transcontinental flight.

The most promising something has happened to cut down my flight every day. So instead of being in Mandville, Pa., tonight with only 245 miles behind me for the day's run, I am in Hornell only sixty-two miles from Elmira while the machine is about three miles from here about Chadakoin.

Short as the flight was, I hope I never have any more trouble in the air than I had to-day. It was the real thing in the danger line, or, at least, it seemed so to me, and that I came out of it with only a few dents and a smashed left rudder bone was lucky. I'll be off in the morning.

All Sorts of Trouble.

I had left Elmira after all sorts of trouble and had straightened out for Hornell when the engine began "missing." I knew what was wrong when I began to drop. This wasn't dangerous as a rule, 2,200 feet up and there were level fields ahead. I turned around and saw that the magneto plugs had slipped, shutting off the first and second cylinders. As I slid down I threw my right hand back and pushed the plugs in. Instantly the power came on and I went up again with everything working perfectly.

Ten minutes more I felt her drop again, and again I pushed the plugs in. Finally I gave it up as a bad job and left them out on the plugs all the time, while I tried to make the run with only five left. But it wouldn't do. I got up to 2,300 feet, and had the wind been right I'd have made it.

I picked out a field above Canisteo and sailed over. I thought the plugs might last and I took my right hand off to land all right. The plugs stayed in all right until I was about to hit the ground, when they jumped again. That stopped my engine before I was ready, and it was the furrows of the field for me. I slid down with a hilt and my left plane was smashed.

Something Wrong All Day.

Something went wrong with the day all through. It opened up with a fog that wouldn't lift until after 8:30 o'clock. I would have been off by six if they hadn't told me then that there was a thick mist over the valley. I rolled over then and woke up at 8. I got down to my machine and began to tune her up, for they had changed motors for me. I wish I had kept the X-1. Now, the mechanician Taylor wanted to give it as an excuse.

FOWLER TO-DAY WILL TRY ONCE MORE TO PASS THE SIERRAS

By FREDERICK MOORE.

RENO, Nev., Sept. 23.—The country has a new pathfinder in Robert G. Fowler, who hurled himself to-day against the Sierra Nevada Cordilleras in an open plane that but a week ago was a mass of wreckage. He met the mountains and all but conquered them.

To-morrow with a new and more powerful engine, he expects to cross Donner Pass, where Lieut. Powler left the ground. As he sped into the sky the wind slapped his craft's steel nerves into a new and channel bout.

At Blue Canyon Fowler faced the most difficult ascent of his trip, which would have taken him, had he been able to go 10 times to Summit, to the top of the range, 7,008 feet above sea level. Here, though his engine lacking in sufficient power is said, he could manoeuver to the 7,000 foot height necessary to lift him across the mild of mountains he turned back, descending several high circles of Cape Horn, small and Blue Canyon. Fowler covered about seventy-five miles.

WALKER TAKES LAST FLING AT MACHINE

Speaker Declares That Interference Results in Only Harm to the Party.

Speaker Joseph Walker addressed several house rallies in Jamaica Plain last night and spoke before the Young Men's Republican Club of Dorchester at Columbia Hall, Upham's Corner. He said in part:

"At the close of this campaign I wish to make my attitude towards the Republican machine perfectly clear. I am a Republican. I believe in the Republican party and in Republican principles. I believe in organization, in leadership and in loyalty to party.

"I believe, however, that the Republican organization belongs to the whole Republican party and should represent the whole party. It should welcome contests within the party and should not attempt to dictate nominations. The State committees and the various city and town committees are chosen to assist in electing Republicans and not in combating them. We all contribute to the expenses of such committees. They are our representatives.

"When a good Republican runs for nomination within the party, it is unfair and it hurts the party for those who are in official position to use the influence acquired to back their favorite. When this is done it is a mere subterfuge to say they are merely acting as individuals and not as officials.

"In this campaign there has been an undisguised organized attempt to make one candidate appear as the regular candidate of the party as against the other. Boston machine through its official head and its control of other various local committees, so far as they can be controlled, is with one of the candidates for Governor, and it is generally believed are handling the campaign in Boston.

"The chief duty of this organization, previous to a primary is to stimulate registration. From reports which have reached me I am afraid that little there has been done in this way. I am informed that in Ward 24 only 300 have registered. Should this be true a substantial fraud has been done in this ward, and yet there are more than 3,000 voters in that ward this year."

NINE CLAIM REWARD IN THE TUCKER CASE

The mysterious person who was expected to be present at the Weston Selectmen's hearing yesterday on the case of seeing Charles L. Tucker leave the Pasadena house on the day that Mabel Page was murdered more than seven years ago did not appear. Neither were the detectives able to award the $2,500 that had been offered by the town for the capture of the slayer.

There were eight claimants besides Mrs. Mary Jane Strumbert. She declared she saw the crime in a vision and that barred her at once.

Arthur Woodward of Quincy said Tucker rode with the boy from Natick on March 31. When he got out of the wagon, he found a knife sheath on the seat. A day or two later I saw that he was suspected of the crime and sent the sheath to the authorities. This led to his conviction."

Frederick A. Tarbox, ex-chief of the Newton police, based his claim on the fact that he swore out the search warrant as a result of which the knife was found in Tucker's home.

Frederick Mitchell, chief of Newton Police, said:

"On April 4, a person called me on the phone and under pledge of secrecy told me that he had seen Tucker near Page's home. I gave the tip to Detective Blanc's case, I didn't do anything, because there was no reason to doubt Mr. Glover's statement as to who killed him. In the Leslie Mullins case I did nothing, though I know the guilty man. He isn't one of the two now serving time either."

"How did you spell cellar in that first letter, Mrs. Strumbert?" the reporter asked.

"Oh, did I make a funny mistake on that? she replied. "I've learned better since."

In the original letter, cellar was spelt "seeler." In the letter written yesterday Mrs. Strumbert spelled it correctly. Mrs. Strumbert is a young looking woman, perhaps forty years old. She did not wish to tell anything of her life, but the lines in her face indicated that it had been a hard one. Once, it is said, some Italians, enemies of hers, attempted to kill her by blowing poisonous gas through the key hole of her bed room. She refused to talk of this.

Looks Like Mrs. Glover.

She is rather short and stocky. Her hair is blond, and the arched eyebrows and a certain fullness about lips and cheeks makes for a close resemblance to Mrs. Lillian M. Glover, widow of Clarence Glover, the murdered Waltham laundryman.

Howard Blodgett, the senior attorney in the firm of Gleason & Blodgett, and Hall said last night over the telephone:

"We have not authorized the effort of this discovery on Mrs. Dodge's affairs. We have always known that she did not write the letter, but all efforts have failed to discover the writer.

"I have the special delivery letter at home. Judge Hall, to whom it was addressed by Judge Hall, when Mr. Strumbert speaks, I shall go to Boston myself next week, and will then plan to go into the matter at length."

MOTHER OF TUCKER NOW LIVES ALONE

By REV. A. E. GEORGE.

In a small back room on the top floor of an unpretentious looking house on Walnut street, one of the quietest streets in Waltham, is living Mrs. Lucy Tucker, mother of Charles L. Tucker, who went to the electric chair June 12, 1906, for killing Mabel Page.

This date, with another one, is fixed in the memories of that mother. The other date is March 31, 1904, when her son was taken into captivity from her old home at Weston.

Here, in these small quarters, with no one to speak to but people, and most of her time is spent in caring for some plants that border the window sill in her room.

With every stitch she takes in making sofa pillows, her thoughts are upon the past. Her income has been small during these years and while she is making it answer for her needs time and events have changed her appearance.

She looks lonely and sad. Her daily comfort is in standing before a miniature photograph of one that she cannot forget. It rests in a conspicuous place on a chiffonier, which all visitors see in their call on her room. It is directly opposite her little cot bed, so that on the awaking of the morning it is the first object that dawns upon her, and during the hours of night, the glare of a neighboring electric light will bring into bold relief upon it its outlines. This is all that she cares for.

Nothing Now to Care For

With nothing now to live for, deprived of her husband, her boy and with but a remaining son far away in Vermont, she cannot help thinking over what has happened.

Her only ambition now is to get back to her old home, where in mid-life she came to her, and have one room there for herself and her cot bed. She is also anxious to get a little girl to board with her, so that she will have some company, and she thinks that with this little girl she may be able to forget some of the events of the past.

The trials of the past six years has told upon her. With her solitude, her lessened income, it is a hard matter to forget the past, and the only ray of happiness which she cherishes is the picture of that picture, which she shows to every visitor and then says, "It might have been so different."

"My life has been a quiet one since coming to Roe here to live. I have to spend much of my time. I see hardly anyone, and I know there is nothing for me to do. I cannot bring myself to it. I cannot help but think about, and I know that I should not dwell on the past, but I cannot help it.

"I am not all alone. My husband has been dead nearly three years, and not for a day does he pass but I think of him and what I should have done.

Tries Hard To Forget.

"My friends say to me that I must not think of the past, and that I should try to make the best of the situation, but try as I will I cannot bring myself to it.

"Every morning I look at the picture of my dead boy, and I pray that I may have the parting look at him. I do not know what I would do without my remembrance to look at it. In my loneliness here, with my home broken up and my faculties destroyed around, I cannot give up dwelling upon the past. I find no friends to gather in their younger days. Those were happy days. As I think what I have passed through since then it seems as a dream, and I cannot bear to dwell long upon all that has happened.

"You know that it is hard for a mother to forget. While every one goes from me, my only living son miles away, and every one has gone from me, I cannot help but think of the past. I have been so unsuccessful of late that it has been unbearable at times to think about what has come to me in the last seven years.

"Perhaps I think as I look at that picture that if I had possessed money things would have been different. Here, though, I cannot help but feel that I am in my loneliness and upon the past. I seem to see one young face dazzling before me. I cannot help seeing it day after day. It haunts me. I am alone day out as I go about work here in this room, and that one word is 'innocent.'

PRESIDENT DEFENDS HIS TARIFF BOARD

Says Members of Ways and Means Committee Were Not Scientific Investigators.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 23.—President Taft in a vigorous speech delivered in this city to-day, valiantly defended his tariff board as being better qualified to obtain the information for a readjustment of the tariff than members of Congress.

The President arrived here at 7:35 o'clock a. m. He was taken at once to the Mercantile Club for breakfast, while he is to be the guest of the Million Population Club. After breakfast he was taken for a forty-mile automobile ride in St. Louis County. On the ride he witnessed for a few minutes a football game and then went to a hotel for a brief rest.

The President went into the history of the tariff board and said that he vetoed three tariff bills during the last session of Congress chiefly on the ground that no time had been taken to investigate the effect of the changes that were proposed.

The members of the tariff board, the President said, were not expected to be experts on the tariff, but men who were fit in the habit of making investigations and reducing them to intelligent conclusions.

"The board," said the President, "is of the highest intelligence and ability, and well qualified by their previous experience to act as investigators, a statement of evidence and judges of issues of fact."

Defends Tariff Board.

The tariff investigations made by the Ways and Means Committee, President Taft averred, were not of such a scientific character as the latter desired.

"Attacks upon the board," declared the President, "as one whose judgment is not worthy of consideration, are not only unfair, but are a reflection upon the good faith and honesty of purpose of its members. I have brought a frank list of matters, everything in my possession bearing upon the subject, and have opened it to the committee. We want to help you. If we are wrong we want to be set right now."

Pressure of Public Opinion.

Take it away," responded the Attorney-General. "I don't want to look at it. We don't need it. We are not going to [illegible]."

In spite of this feeling of absolute confidence in its soundness under the "light of recent decisions of the supreme court and even before those decisions were rendered, the Steel Trust was apprehending an attack under the Sherman law. Its controlling minds realize acutely the existence of the feeling of public opinion, as being brought t ohear on the Government by the present political campaign. They were puzzled for a few hours to know whether the Government would [illegible] Attorney General Wickersham [illegible] Steel Trust now is the criminal violation of the law. When the Attorney-General denied the allegation the Steel Trust magnates and their counsel declared that this was no more than they expected of him.

STEEL CORPORATION READY FOR ATTACK

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—The United States Steel Corporation expects to be attacked by the Government. It is prepared to meet the attack. No apprehension is felt by the men who originated the corporation will not measure up to or by the men who are managing it that every present requirement of the Sherman anti-trust law, as interpreted by the Supreme Court in the Standard Oil and Tobacco cases.

These statements are authoritative. They are based upon assertions made by men in a position to know thoroughly the character, the purposes and the operations of the corporations. Before the great corporation was launched the utmost lawyers in the United States were employed by its framers to study carefully, analyze critically and measure with precision every word, every sentence, every section and every paragraph in the articles of incorporation, with the view of determining before hand the precise question as to whether the organization was in thorough accord with the law and with the letter as well as the spirit of the Sherman law.

Approved by Big Legal Minds.

A leading member of nearly every bar association in the country was put on this work, one after another. The result was approved by the Government was pronounced by the Government, then counsel for the finance committee, went to Washington, carrying with him the original charter, the books of accounts, all the minutes of the meetings of the boards, and, at request, were asked to turn them over to Attorney-General Bonaparte.

"I hear you are going to attack us. I have brought a trunk full of papers, everything in my possession bearing upon the subject and open to your inspection. We want to help you. If we are wrong we want to be set right now."

Pressure of Public Opinion.

Take it away," responded the Attorney-General. "I don't want to look at it. We don't need it. We are not going to attack you."

MINISTER SET FREE URGES JAIL REFORM

Rev. Mr. Bayliss, Who Served 93 Days, Calls Conditions Abominable.

A clergyman's experiences as a prisoner in jail are related in the following remarkable story of the Rev. E. Ebenezer Bayliss of Somerville, who spent ninety-three days in a cell, after an article in the Somerville Sun libelling Mayor John M. Weeks. The Rev. Mr. Bayliss has been released and will preach this evening in Grace Universalist Church in Elm street, Somerville. He declares that notwithstanding the experience he is not dismayed as to the future. Here is his own story of life in jail, in which he relates numerous abhorrent conditions not known to the public:

By REV. E. EBENEZER BAYLISS.

My experience has shown me that there is plenty of the Christianity that consists in giving to the poor in well and beautiful thoughts, but not so much of the kind that dives down into their pockets to render tangible help where it is most needed.

What our prisons need is some one to go in and minister to the suffering of the poor deeks who have sinned against society, but who have had many of them down, at least they are not absolutely depraved.

I am a free man again and I tell you it is good to be out in the pure air and to have a clear conscience—things that are essential without which life would not be bearable.

I have received from my experiences during the past year, some of them very trying and others very chastening and molded us to be better men. I am glad for what has happened. I want to take this final opportunity, after the last word I have to say, to tell you that I was totally innocent of my wrongdoing, and that the charges against me by the mayor were wholly unfounded.

Victim of Circumstances.

I was the victim of circumstances, that's all. The case is familiar to you and you have had it before the public at length. Suffice it to say that the article in the Somerville Sun, which was decidedly libellous, had in it not a single word or syllable that I had not read. It was manufactured by two newspaper reporters, who put it down on my mouth and who have since admitted as much to me.

But I do want to say a few things about my wife and my prison experiences. First, when I found that I could not pay the fine and was sentenced upon me, and sent to prison, my wife, who is far from strong, was left without any means of support other than that I derived from the sale of my wares.

Many people in the community thought and freely expressed themselves to that effect that the whole affair was a "charming outrage." Yet during the ninety-three days that I was in prison and my dear wife was all alone, with no one to speak a word and no one to sympathize, when so little—and I don't mean dollars and coin either—would have meant so much, none was forthcoming.

Cry Out for Reform.

Not that I would have had it all for from it. And those tokens of sympathy are appreciated more than what they were received from William Penn Nixon, the Chicago Inter Ocean editor, and others will always be remembered.

But, you know, I do want to say, to begin with, that I have no personal axe to grind against the constitution or against any one there in particular. As for myself, I am unconcerned I have nothing to complain of. I have had my day in court, and I know that it cannot be run as it ought to be, however, certain things cry for reform.

When prisoners are admitted they are given no medical examination whatever. The sick, as well as the well are all in the eyes of the prison officials to receive the same food and the same treatment.

The result is that there are any number of prisoners suffering from very serious and shocking diseases who receive either no treatment or treatment of the most perfunctory sort. In addition all these men use the same knives and forks, the same drinking cups, and the same towels as the rest of the men. They are shaved every day with the same razor.

In other words no precautions whatever are taken to guard healthy individuals from contamination from diseases, the virulence and contagiousness of which are only too well known.

The sanitary conditions of the jail are abominable. They are not fit to describe in print, and they are unnecessary when I think of them. The bedding, walls and floors swarm with vermin, and the half-hearted attempt to get rid of them by the occasional sprinkling of fly-smelling powder only emphasizes their presence.

Humanity, common courtesy, the slightest sympathetic realization that we are all human beings, after all, is unknown. There is no one to say a good word to the prisoners. During the three months I was there we had only two sermons, and these were performers in the extreme, and delivered without the slightest idea of appropriateness and without any spiritual needs of the listeners.

KOKOVSOFF BECOMES Ppremier OF RUSSIA

Minister of Finance Takes Up Post Made Vacant by Stolypin's Death.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—A despatch to the Times from St. Petersburg says that M. Kokovsoff has resigned the office of Minister of Finance, has definitely assumed the premiership made vacant by the death of M. Stolypin.

Kokovsoff is regarded as no less a treasless statesman than was his murdered predecessor, and he takes up the task after a training which surpasses that of the premier. No statesman in Russia has done as much with the governments and financial interests of Europe. That is to carry on the policies of Stolypin is certain, but that his reactionary tendencies will be softened by his previous contact with the more advanced governments of Europe is inevitable.

The chief lieutenant of Count Witte when the latter was at the head of the Muscovite Treasury, he has always been identified with the Liberal party, and Russia is indebted to him for every one of the reforms in penal legislation, in the organization and in the management of its prisons, that have taken place within the last quarter of a century.

It was largely due to that Kokovsoff first became identified with the Treasury department, and from that time on he has had a very active share in the direction of the economic and financial policy of the empire.

To the title of Minister of Finance, which he twice held, concern little idea of the power and the extent of the authority wielded by Kokovsoff in that capacity. It was the government drink monopoly which yields a revenue to the treasury of no less than $700,000,000, was under his control; the customs were also under his rule, and in connection therewith he exercised supreme command over the so-called frontier guards.

All new railroad projects and concessions had to receive his approval before being issued, while the two great railroads of the Far East—namely, the Trans-Caspian and the Trans-Siberian lines—were under his direction.

BRIDE-ELECT BOSS STOPS A CANDIDATE

Representative Sciglimo Will Leave Politics, and Why? Do You Ask!

A week from next Wednesday, Representative Alfred Sciglimo of Ward Six, the old "Deare" ward, will take a bride and leave politics.

By the way, Sciglimo, the first of these acts is the cause of the second.

The future Mrs. Sciglimo, who is now Miss Sabina M. Repetto of Beacon street, simply will not marry a man in politics. She doesn't intend to be a "State House widow" as they sometimes call the wives of men who devote themselves to political affairs.

With that ingenuity which has already built him a standing career in politics, Representative Sciglimo sums up the situation thus:

"I am a good machine man. I have followed the Boss' orders in politics. When I marry I get a new Boss. She says 'You get out of politics and stay out.' What the Boss says goes."

Chance for Democrat.

For what other reason there is to be a chance for some other Democrat to go to Beacon Hill from Ward Six, next January, is not definitely assumed. Sciglimo will know Sciglimo no more. After Wednesday, October 9, he will be the minority in the House of Sciglimo.

Sciglimo is not complaining that this is any sudden "bite of mind on the part of his bride-elect." She has always been against his political life. When he was elected to the Common Council she was pleased just about, though she was pleased still more when he was elected to the House of Representatives upon political a career. When it came time to talk marriage, though, she definitely assumed that when she wedded she proposed to be the wife of a husband not of a politician.

Miss Sabina Repetto is the daughter of Mrs. Mary Repetto, who lives at No. 842 Winthrop avenue, Beachmont. She is described with the delightful brevity of her race, to which is added a personal charm which has distinguished her from girlhood.

When she was a little girl, living in the North End and going to the public schools, she knew Sciglimo. They grew down her back, she was keenly admired by young Alfred Sciglimo. Though a few years older than she he would wait every night for her at the close of school, to escort her home and carry her books. As she grew older only a few years from childhood it was a fine arrangement all around.

School Romance Grows.

This boy and girl friendship never grew less. When Sciglimo moved to Beachmont Alfred Sciglimo, rising to young manhood, went there to call. It became more than a neighborly romance was blossoming into love.

Then politics entered and started to [illegible] Sciglimo. Friends of Sciglimo urged him to run for the Common Council. He talked with Miss Repetto about it with the result just told. He was elected to the Common Council.

In the Fall of that year he ran for the State Senate and was defeated. He thought in the eyes of his constituents that he had been treated unfairly in that. And though he prospered politically, Miss Repetto grew more and more to feel that the very prospects for political success were taking him further and further from the view of Democratic gains. In the eyes of the young woman politics was a dirty game. Representative Sciglimo was making fine headway.

But the political machine has been outwitted by a "Boss," though it has had a chance on earth. Hence there will be a wedding on Wednesday morning, October 4, at the Church of Our Lady of Perpetual Succor, Beachmont. The marriage will be celebrated by the Rev. Francis Houston [illegible] Hopkins of Hyde Park, the bridal couple, and by the Rev. James W. Hickey, pastor of the church.

OBADIAH GARDNER NEW MAINE SENATOR

AUGUSTA, Me., Sept. 23.—Obadiah Gardner of Rockland, Me., was to-day appointed by Governor Plaisted United States Senator to fill out the unexpired term of the late Senator William P. Frye.

For fifteen years Mr. Gardner was master of the State Grange. When the sudden reversal in Maine politics occurred a year ago, insuring the election of a Democrat to succeed Senator Hale, Mr. Gardner was mentioned prominently in the caucus of Democratic members of the Maine Legislature for the seat finally awarded to Charles F. Johnson, who was chosen Senator. In the election of Senator Johnson by Democrats and supporters of Mr. Gardner solidly supported the latter.

Governor Plaisted to-day selected Mr. Gardner from a field of nine candidates presented for his consideration. The appointment will take effect immediately, the assembling of Congress in December, when the appointee will be sworn in and take a candidate for Governor of Maine. He was defeated, but cut down the normal Republican majority of 30,000 to 17,000.

Governor Plaisted, defending his confidence in Mr. Gardner, appointed him early in the Winter to the chairmanship of the Board of State Assessors, one of the most important offices in the State of Maine. This board has been so efficient that the new Senator has ever held.

Appointed as a Surprise.

In some respects the appointment was a surprise. It has always been customary for a Senator from the more populous eastern part of the State and the other Republican member of the delegation to be an Eastern Maine man, and it was thought that the senator would be chosen from the western section.

Mr. Gardner, however, is a Senior-elect Gardner was a logical appointee. Last Fall he was candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor against Governor W. T. Haines, who succeeded to the convention and was elected.

Notwithstanding his defeat, he and Governor Plaisted remained personal and political friends and it was a cordial countenance on the part of the Governor to [illegible] Gardner at the time of this opportunity.

When Gardner was a candidate for the Senate to succeed Hale, he argued that the Senate should be elected, as Senator Frye, who was then alive, Representatives Mc[illegible]dge, Dodds and Guernsey were lawyers and Representative Hinds of the First district was also editor. Senator Johnson is also a lawyer.

Say Bryan Named Gardner.

Immediately after the announcement that Gardner would be appointed Senator, political tongues throughout Maine began wagging, according to the story told by men prominent in public affairs in that State. The new Senator was selected by Governor Frye and it is thought that Mr. Gardner was cared for, as he had been appointed State Assessor by Governor Plaisted.

William J. Bryan had been in Maine several days, and it was only last Thursday he called upon Governor Plaisted at Augusta. Mr. Bryan and the governor held a long conference and to-day Mr. Bryan was congratulating the appointment as United States Senator.

It is generally believed that Mr. Bryan selected Mr. Obadiah Gardner, and to [illegible] Democrats say that Mr. Gardner has always been a "Bryan man" and that he has always been an advocate of the "free silver platform." Governor Plaisted has always been an ardent supporter of Mr. Bryan.

It is well known in Maine that the other candidates, especially Edward B. Winslow of Portland, Hiram Hamlin of Portland, Democrats, and they holted the free silver platform of Mr. Bryan.

EARTHQUAKE DOES DAMAGE IN ALASKA

Cable Between Valdez and Sitka Severed; Three Volcanoes Smoking.

VALDEZ, Alaska, Sept. 23.—The most violent earthquake yet experienced in Valdez occurred at 7:02 Thursday night. The oscillations were northwest and southeast and their duration was fifty-two seconds. Valdez is built of wood with no building more than two stories high and no damage was done. The cable at Sitka was severed.

The cable ship Burnside has been sent to repair the cable, but little communication with Southwestern Alaska will be had for two weeks.

A steamer arriving here a few days ago reported a severe earthquake at Yakutat early in the month. The three Alaskan volcanoes—Shishaldin, Hogoslof and Payloded—are in moderate eruption, according to all reports.

MARRIED 63 YEARS.

BILLERICAY, Sept. 23.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Copeland yesterday celebrated their sixty-third year of married life at their home, No. 192 Summer street. Relatives and friends of the family called and extended their congratulations. Copeland is a G. A. R. veteran and a former prominent business man of this city. He is nearly four years old and his wife is eighty-one.

PE-RU-NA'S NEED IN FAMILY.

MRS. ELINORE BARRETT

Peruna a Family Necessity.

Mrs. Elinore Barrett, 810 South Lincoln St., Robinson, Illinois, writes: "I just want to tell you what a wonderful medicine I have found Peruna to be in my family. I have used it for years, and I am sure it has saved me many and many a doctor bill.

"I first used it myself and found it cured me. Then my little girl was cured of a dreadful case of catarrh of the head.

"I always have a bottle of Peruna in my house, as I find it a real necessity where there is a family."

Colds and Catarrh.

Mrs. M. F. Jones, Burning Springs, Ky., writes: "We have been using Peruna for some time, and have no hesitancy in recommending it for the 'one thousand and one' ailments of humanity. No family should ever be without it, for it is an unfailing cure for colds, and it is an excellent remedy to prevent and relieve croup.

'And to speak from a standpoint of experience I can candidly say that it is the remedy for internal catarrh (as I have found in the many unfortunates in this respect). From a personal test and from the testimony of many others I shall not hesitate to recommend it especially to all suffering women.

Catarrh for Years—Peruna Relieved.

Mrs. Alice Bogle, 803 Clinton St., Circleville, Ohio, writes: "I want to inform you what Peruna has done for me.

"I have been afflicted with catarrh for several years. I have tried different medicines and none seemed to do me any good until I used Peruna. I have taken a bottle and can praise it very highly for the good it has done me.

"I also find it of great benefit to my children."

How Many Men Keep Youthful

(From The Social Register)

It is well known that within recent years the men have become extensive patrons of beauty specialists and masseurs. Not only the fastidious, but men generally who have a care for personal appearance. This has also led to the employment by many of means calculated to enhance or preserve physical attractiveness, especially by those who abhor "beauty parlors."

Of these, perhaps the most widely used is ordinary mercolized wax—which explains the mystery of the silver-haired gentleman with the boyish face. The mercolized wax, obtainable at any druggists, is applied after shaving, the same as cold cream, only not rubbed in. This gradually absorbs the dead and half-dead cuticle in tiny particles, revealing the fresher, healthier-hued skin beneath. To secure best results many apply the wax at night, washing it off in the morning. Women not only encourage husbands in this, but use the treatment themselves.

JEWS HOLD SERVICES FOR NEW YEAR, 5672

Impressive Ceremonies in All the Synagogues and Temples of Greater Boston.

More than 75,000 Jews assembled in the temples and synagogues of Greater Boston yesterday, to attend the impressive services of Rosh Hashonah, the New Year in the Hebrew calendar. Millions of Jews all over the globe welcomed the arrival of the year 5672, according to Hebraic reckoning, with practically the same service. One of the most impressive ceremonies of Rosh Hashonah was the blowing of "shofar", or ram's horn.

The New Year began at sundown Friday night, when services were held in all of the synagogues of Greater Boston. The second services were held yesterday morning in both reformed and orthodox congregations. The significance of the blowing of the ram's horn is the awakening to the duties of life and dedication a holy consecration.

With the arrival of the Jewish New Year, a series of the most important and most generally observed holidays is ushered in. The festival culminates with Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement, which falls on October 2. Yom Kippur is the day of fasting, memorial and prayer.

Rabbi Harry Levi conducted the impressive services at Rosh Hashonah in Temple Israel, Commonwealth avenue, for the first time. The new rabbi was installed last Sunday. There was special musical service rendered by the choir under H. L. Gideon, organist.

Rabbi M. Riesser and Cantor Ernest Wolkowitch led the services at the Union Park Street Temple. Rabbi Fish's services were held in all of the Jewish institutions and a service was held for the Jews who are being detained by the immigration authorities on Long Wharf.

GARDEN PRIZES ARE AWARDED CHILDREN

Youngsters Made Happy With Ribbons and Cash by Roslindale Club.

Red ribbons and blue ribbons pinned to little boys' shirtwaists and little girls' dresses made tots very proud and happy youngsters at Pierce Field yesterday afternoon when the Roslindale Community Club gathered the children together to receive prizes for the Summer work in their gardens. Fifty children entered home flower and vegetable gardens in the contest, and their mothers were everywhere to show what the Summer's work had accomplished. But it wasn't only the ribbons that made the children happy—the money prizes, too, ranging from $2 for the first prize to a quarter for the kiddies in the honorable mention class.

William Locke, supervisor of gardens at Civic Service House, made the awards and the names judges were Miss Julia Harrod Bradley, director of the South End Industrial School Gardens; Miss Mary A. McCarthy, a teacher in the Longfellow School, and Miss Nellie Lester Lamb, chairman.

The gardens were started at the instigation of the Community Club, an organization started out to Roslindale last Spring with 125 charter members, including boys from every church in the town. The ladies are delighted with the success that has come in the work and say that it has had a wonderful effect on the boys. Not only have the small boys treat other couples gardens as they would their own, now pass by them of their own to watch and care for. The committee expects between three and four hundred entries for next year. The prizes follow:

Class A, for vegetable garden, for children under 10 years of age—First prize, $2; second prize, $1.50; third prize, $1; fourth prize, 50c; fifth prize, 25c.

Class B, for flower gardens, for children under 10 years of age—First prize, $2; second prize, $1.50; third prize, $1; fourth prize, 50c; fifth prize, 25c.

Class D, for flower gardens, for children between 10 and 15 years of age—First prize, Ethel Thomas; second prize, Ethel Singer; third prize, Gertrude Dyer.

MISS ALICE RUNNELLS, TO BECOME THE BRIDE OF WILLIAM JAMES

MISS ALICE RUNNELLS

Mr. James is a son of the late Prof. James of Harvard. Miss Runnells is a daughter of John S. Runnells of Chicago.

WILLIAM JAMES TO WED MISS RUNNELLS

Harvard Artist Wins Chicago Heiress, Daughter of Pullman Car Co. President.

An announcement which will greatly interest the exclusive inner circle of literary, artistic and university life in Cambridge and Boston is that of the engagement of William James of Cambridge to Miss Alice Rutherford Runnells of Chicago.

Miss Runnells is the daughter of John S. Runnells, president of the Pullman Company. Her father is tremendously wealthy.

Mr. James is the elder son of the late Professor William James of Harvard. He is resident and ordinary James, the famous author whose novels have been source of much discussion.

The younger Mr. James is a graduate of Harvard, class of 1903. In college he took his athletic diversion for golf and rowing. He shone particularly in aquatics and rowed on the varsity crew.

Mr. James is an artist of note and a member of the Tavern Club, whose members are supposed to achieve something more than ordinary fame. He does not, however, dabble in other field of talent. He has kept up his golfing interests and is a member of the Dunley Country Club.

Thousands Make Merry at Democratic Barbecue

Governor Foss, Mayor and Other Candidates Speak

which was stationed on a hill between the track and the entrance to the grove aided Governor Foss and played "Hail to the Chief."

About five minutes afterwards the Mayor arrived.

"How do you do, Mr. Mayor?" replied the Governor.

Just pleasant little formalities, but they put the field events on the blink. Everybody in the grandstand crowded around to see the meeting and the mob on the hill side where the seats are free grew wild with excitement. One man leaped the fence and ran across the track. Two thousand people, including numerous women followed, and at once the track was jammed with a huge mob which packed itself solidly in front of the grand stand where the Mayor was shaking hands with the Governor.

They were trying to pull off a relay race and the officials said they did not nobody saw the finish.

Talking to Beat the Band.

The Mayor and Governor and the retinue of politicians climbed into the bandstand and Joe Maynard looked proudly down upon the throng. He gave a hysterical expression but usefully and introduced the Mayor.

The band shot over on the hill spied Jim Curley coming down the road and started to play "Hail, the Conquering Hero Comes," just as the Mayor was saying "Fellow Democrats."

"Somebody stop that band," cried Pat.

"Never mind, Johnny," yelled a henchman from the crowd. "You can talk to beat the band."

The band stopped. "We shall stop the Republican party as easily as we stopped the band," cried the unterrified Mayor and the mob cheered itself hoarse.

The Mayor in his speech declared he was for living wages for working girls. He referred to the remarks of Norman H. White, candidate for Governor, as follows:

"In this country hundreds of thousands of boys and girls work in places unfit for them to be in at all. Massachusetts little girls of tender ages work in mills and factories, dry goods and department stores, and in other stores and wages are pitiful and inhuman. Not only the little girls, but young women work in these places for weekly wages that will not average more than six dollars. Some of them get but two dollars and a half to three dollars a year for the work a girl going to do? She can't get any more money for her labor, there is no getting around it. She has got to have more money if want to have a contented, respectable life. We are ashamed of a minimum wage for such cases in this commonwealth.

"This is a condition of affairs which we need be remedy. Mr. White knows well that has declared 100 per cent. in dividends in four years. It is my wish that the South and West are organized against New England when the Republican party in this Commonwealth has stood for the principles of protection that has made New England wealthy and cosmopolitan and defends such as Mr. White himself admits."

The Governor Speaks.

The Mayor explained that he was going to introduce the generous souls who were candidates for various offices on the State ticket, but the Governor had to leave and he asked to speak immediately.

Governor Foss began by saying that "Right is on our side and we are sure to win. Then he got down to the real subject of reciprocity.

"The defeat of reciprocity in Canada cannot be laid at the door of the Democratic party. A fortnight before the vote given on reciprocity with Canada long ago, the Republican party in Congress had stood for the principles of protection that has caused reciprocity would be followed, and reciprocity is the outcome of the unrelenting of tariff revision.

"It would have followed as surely as the sun follows through the breaking of the clouds, that this seeming defeat would be eventual victory. The very signality of the victory will awaken the people to the need awakened after the Paine-Aldrich bill had been passed. The Dingley tariff must have a measure of reciprocity. The Paine-Aldrich bill threw out reciprocity and substituted retaliation. Then out came the bill and demanded reciprocity. White knows it.

"The Republican party is responsible for this failure and it will have to take the responsibility. It is responsible for the present high cost of living. This it cannot shirk or cast upon our shoulders. It cannot truthfully be cast upon the year and in 1912."

George W. Anderson Heard.

The next speaker was George W. Anderson, candidate for Attorney-General. Mr. Anderson spoke briefly and forcefully and made an excellent impression. When he said, "I have been a hardworking lawyer for twenty years; I have always been a Democrat, and if I secure this office it will be administered impartially and every effort will be made to make the government of laws, not men," he was heartily cheered.

Some humor was injected by the appearance of the two candidates for Secretary of State, Francis J. Donahue of Fordham, who said: "Give the young man a chance," and the aged Civil War veteran, Edward Skelton.

Mr. Skelton created much amusement when he repeated a dialogue in which Custer Lodge got left and take the office of Secretary of State away from veterans because they were too old and couldn't be of much use any more.

Mr. Skelton concluded by saying: "Every G. A. R. man would vote for me if I were running on the Prohibition ticket, such is the courage spirit of the Grand Army of the Republic. Mr. Donahue is young. He can't help it. I am old. I can't wait much longer."

Joseph H. Leonard, for auditor, Charles B. Streeker for auditor, and numerous other candidates were introduced. Congressman Curley jumped over the Foss minutes limit placed by the Mayor and delivered a long speech upon national politics. Mr. Curley endeavored to interest the crowd, but he is thoroughly conversant with matters of national importance, and if he is desirous of himself at present by smoothing the State senatorial ambitions of one Thomas Joyce Boyle of Ward 14.

Big Greeting for Curley.

"What is the issue of the day and hour in Massachusetts?" asked Mr. Curley. According to the sizing Achilles, resting within hill tent up on the storm-tossed shore, the issue is by the use of the closed factories, of idle looms, of the cessation of industry, of hunger, want and woe. If Governor Foss is re-elected, the crowd laughed, say that Achilles sulking Achilles are Senator Lodge, and hurrayed for the classical allusion. The Congressman then went on to quote statistics showing the profits made by New England mills, and concluded by saying that after Mr. Curley got through somebody discovered John H. Thayer of Worcester, the former Congressman. They dragged him upon the band stand, and he issued a clarion call for all Democrats to cluster and collect what is coming to them.

Mr. O'Shaughnessy made a fine impression upon the crowd, despite the fact that it was very tired, having been standing in a slightly mucked mass upon the turf of the athletic field. His voice could be heard to everybody, and he sang the Eucharist in a neat and skilful manner. He began by complimenting Messrs. Curley, Murray and Thayer, and paid his respects to Mayor Fitzgerald. Then he got to Speaker Clarke, "whose renunciation of Speaker Clark, "whose renunciation of Champ Clark."

Congressman William F. Murray was introduced as the Mayor of the "Back Congressional," which made a big hit among everybody. Congressman Murray also replied by a vigorous and logical address upon the tariff and other matters of national policy.

DOUBLE LEGAL STAMPS FORENOONS

HERE'S WHY FARE TO NAHANT STAYS HIGH

Were it not for the influence of the Nantasket Steamboat Company, it was charged yesterday, the Nahant Steamboat Company would reduce the price for a round trip between Boston and Nahant from 50 to 25 cents.

As has been pointed out in the Sunday AMERICAN, thousands of people have been deprived of the enjoyment of Nantasket Beach because the company charges 50 cents for a return trip when, in the opining of business men, the company would be able to make enormous profits at 25 cents.

The effect of publishing the story about the saying up of Hull every year by the company discontinuing a number of its boats early in the Fall, caused the company to change its mind promptly. The new Fall schedule, providing for a very much restricted service, was to have gone into effect last Monday. But instead the company decided to continue, for a time not stated, the full service.

But the Nantasket Company is still charging 50 cents for that resort and return and how it gets away with it the company was largely responsible for the 50 cent price to Nahant and Hull.

Officials of the Nahant Steamship Company admitted yesterday that they could do a much greater business than they do now if the price was cut to 25 cents, and that it would be a profitable business at the cheaper price. They said that the Nantasket company would not allow them to make the change.

Two of the old boats of the Nantasket company were sold to the Nahant company some time ago and it was said that the Nahant people and Mayor Curley with understanding that the price should be cut to 25 cents.

Thus, many people, who can not go to Nantasket because they can not afford to pay 50 cents, are deprived of that pleasure. Which should be cheap because of the high price of the tickets.

Hull residents, it was said yesterday, would take measures when the next Legislature convenes, to have the steamship company be placed under the control of the Railroad Commission, so that something may be done toward regulating the company instead of allowing it to have its own say about everything.

Two Men Are Responsible.

It was not generally known who were the men who reap the profits of the Nantasket company until the facts were told in last Sunday's AMERICAN.

Hull people were generally surprised when they learned that their popular fellow townsman, Ebed Ripley, and their genial Summer resident, Charles H. Barnes, practically own the company that had operated for many years and is operated at this time of year.

It was remarked by more than one resident that if the Nantasket company was good, and lately accepted service, there might be some reason for what is regarded as an exorbitant passenger rate, but neither Mr. Ripley nor Mr. Barnes is in want for money.

Ebed Ripley is the head of one of the most prosperous business concerns in Boston. Charles H. Barnes is a millionaire lawyer. Both have five per cent. stock kept up in part doubtless from the profits of the Nantasket Steamship Company.

One man who was fortunate enough to own a few shares of the Nantasket company—and there are but few shares scattered about—said that the company paid 8 per cent. Then he remarked:

"I'd like to know why the officials are that are paid the high officials."

But that information could not be obtained. When a reporter called at the office of the Nantasket company he was mulled as to the number of passengers the company carried, this question was denied him. But the collector of the port gave the Sunday AMERICAN the figures.

The Nantasket company carried about 380,000 people between June 17 and Labor Day. Add to these figures the number received from the day the line began to run in boats early in June, to the time it ended in October, when the last boat is tied up, and the total number of passengers for the season reach close to a million.

At 25 cents each this means $250,000 in cash. The total capitalization of the Nantasket line is only $500,000 and gross receipts equaling half the capital is a pretty profitable four months' work, especially as running a steamboat company is only a side line for Messrs. Barnes and Ripley. Barnes was a law partner of John D. Long before he retired to enjoy his millions.

New York Steamboat Fares.

From One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, New York, to Coney Island and return is close to forty miles, yet the Coney Island steamboat lines only charge 40 cents a round trip.

The Patten line steamers sail from New York down to Long Branch on the Jersey coast and return, a distance of close to sixty miles, and charge only 50 cents.

The Sandy Hook steamers, carrying among American excursion steamers, do not charge as much per mile as the Nantasket line steamers.

From Boston to Portland by sea is 115 miles, though the Eastern Steamship Company asks only one dollar.

From Boston to Nantasket and return is a trifle less than eighteen miles, but Messrs. Barnes and Ripley, the multi-millionaire, not to mention their partner, low-townsmen, not to mention the people of Boston, to the tune of fifty cents for a round trip.

There might be some excuse for this if the Nantasket line steamers were fine fast boats, but such is not the case. They are well kept, it is true, but they are low-powered boats and capable of only sixty or eight miles. Economy in the watchword. When asked they may possibly make ten miles an hour, usually they toy along at the rate of eight or nine.

If they happened to be crowded, which is the case on any one afternoon or evening, several hundred people have to stand among bales, boxes and barrels in the lower deck. Messrs. Barnes and Ripley turn an honest penny carrying freight on their high-priced boats.

Ancients Will Revive Muster Warriors Guests of Col. Benton

HOST AND HOSTESS OF THE ANCIENTS

COLONEL AND MRS EVERETT C. BENTON

THE BENTON HOME IN BELMONT

Belmont is the country home of Colonel Benton, where the muster will be held.

Ceremony To-morrow in Belmont to be First of Its Kind in Over a Century.

The Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Massachusetts will hold a muster to-morrow from 1 o'clock until 5 in Belmont, at the home of Colonel Everett C. Benton, in honor of his fiftieth birthday anniversary. The entire company of 400 men is expected to participate.

This will be the first muster of its kind in more than a hundred years, and will be one of the most important military events ever held in the State.

"Belmont," the large estate situated in Oakley Road, and from which the town derived its name, has been alive with preparations for the last week. A small army of men has been pitching tents, and making preparations for a royal welcome.

Governor Foss will be present with an escort, all in full dress uniform. By order of the Secretary of War, a special detachment has been ordered from the Watertown arsenal, and will fire a salute upon the arrival of the Governor. Invitations have also been sent to all the prominent military men in Massachusetts, whose attendance in full dress uniform is requested. Congressman Weeks, Adjutant-General Bolan, and many others will be accepted the invitation.

Ancients in 200 Tents.

The events of the day will include prize drills by the various companies, dress parade and retreat. The men will encamp in two hundred tents, the largest of which, the mess tent, is more than 100 feet in length.

The school children of Waverly and Belmont will attend in a body and it is expected that from five to ten thousand spectators will be present. No special grand-stands have been erected as the surrounding hills afford ample room, and a fine view, of the proceedings.

Colonel Benton will entertain his officers and a number of invited guests at dinner, where plans for the 274th annual Field Day at Bermuda will be discussed. More than 5000 members of the Ancients have signified their intention of going to Bermuda.

The company will assemble at the Armory in Boston this next Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock, where they will form and parade along State to Washington, and down Summer street to the South Station, where the company will leave for Fall River to board the steamer "Puritan" for New York. Three tours only are allowed in New York before the detachment is transferred to the Bermuda, which sails at 10 a. m. for Bermuda.

Festivities start right after lunch with a band concert and athletic games on the vessel's spacious decks. In the evening more music, dancing, a mock trial, and games of various sorts will provide entertainment for all.

Sunday Service on Ship.

The Sunday service is set at 10:30, and will be followed by a concert. The dawn of Monday, October 2, should find the party in sight of the Bermuda Islands, and it is hoped to land directly after breakfast.

The opening event on Bermudan soil is to be a review by Governor Kitchener and his staff, on the government grounds, from where the company will march to Prospect Hall, escorted by the governor's ordnance troops, where a reception by the Governor will conclude the day. The afternoon has been left free for sight-seeing, driving, boating and bathing. Dinner at the hotel will be followed by the combined band concert of the Ancients and the Second Bermudian Battalion bands.

Tuesday the Ancients are to be the guests of the Government and City officials, when the evening will take place the banquet given by the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company to their Bermuda hosts. In accordance with a special order all members of the company who attend this dinner must wear either full dress uniform or evening dress.

Wednesday, October 4, will conclude the stay on Bermudan soil, the merry company sets sail at 2 o'clock on the Ocean, reaching Fall River early the next day, and Boston at 8:15, arriving via a special train.

GRAND TRUNK GAINS MUCH BY NEW LINES

Control of Electric Roads in Maine Gives Important Routes Toward Boston.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 23.—The Grand Trunk Railroad is believed to be in control of the majority of the stock of the Portland Railroad, and has either purchased or procured an option upon the stock of the Atlantic Coast Electric Railroad, which owns the Portland road at Biddeford, and continues to Portsmouth, N. H.

Portland is delighted at the situation as it was feared that the New Haven interests would come up to the Portland Railroad, which completes with New Haven lines from here to Old Orchard and Biddeford.

The Grand Trunk's influence in Portland has always been powerful, and the control of the electric lines means that cheap transportation will continue to be offered between Old Orchard, Biddeford and Portland. The Grand Trunk has as yet not professed to know nothing of the purchase of the Portland Railroad, but it is no doubt that the deal has been effected.

The Portland railroad is one of the best equipped and operates one of the largest double track lines in the country. It has over 100 miles of track and runs expresses to Old Orchard, Saco, Biddeford, Buxton, Gorham, the Forediside, and Presumpscot. Its equipment consists of 100 modern cars. Much of its lines outside the city of Portland are owned by the right of way, and are suitable for the running of heavy trains.

Road Has Helped Portland.

The Atlantic Coast Line follows the shore most of the way to Portsmouth, and a connection with the Boston & Maine at Portsmouth would be made immediately. Such a connection would mean much to Portland, as it would mean that Portland would be the common point for all roads entering Maine from the south. Boston and Portland would be only a short jump to Bangor by the terminal of the proposed line to Eastern Maine.

Before the Grand Trunk controlled Portland that city possessed one of the finest harbors on the Atlantic coast, and was only an electric connection away from Boston. Grand Trunk officials have always kept the Portland harbor in the front rank, and it is the largest grain exporter on the Atlantic coast. The exports of grain are those of Louisville besides.

During the Winter season, when Portland gets the business of Montreal, which is closed by ice, the Grand Trunk piers are full of grain. It has been many a year that Portland has not been the busiest grain shipping port in the country.

Must Have New Terminal.

To reach Portland and an outlet to the sea, the Grand Trunk has thrust its way through the wilderness a distance of about 300 miles. Save for a few small towns and villages, the road is a single track line, and its officials, in talking of the future business, for there are very few towns of importance on its line.

The terminal which has been erected in Portland, and which is now in use, was finished ten years ago. It is already too small for the business done by the Grand Trunk, officials have dreamed of a new terminal, and it will be done in the past decade. They have outlined a plan for the new depot, either to build their terminal at a tremendous cost which would mean a great financial burden.

Each year Portland will have larger and better ships at the Grand Trunk piers as the business increases, and the Grand Trunk will have sailings from Portland.

The Canard, White Star, Dominion and other lines could be put into the port if need. They can get more passengers for Portland than Boston, as the Grand Trunk can fill vessels with freight and not with passengers, as is done at Boston. That is why the steamship lines could not afford to call either at Portland or Boston. The Grand Trunk has control of the passenger business, and it is believed to have its eye on Boston.

The two electric railroads stretching east, south and west from Portland can be readily adapted to the needs of a great steam railroad. They run through the most populous sections of Maine and New Hampshire, and can be depended upon to develop a big traffic.

Large Business Ahead.

J. H. Biddle, the Grand Trunk agent, said yesterday of the purchase of the railroad:

"The freight and passenger outlook for the Winter is unusually good," said Mr. Biddle. "We shall have the steamers of the Dominion, White Star and Allan lines here. The sailings of the Canard line, which has purchased the Portland Steamship Company, will be increased.

"We expect to ship vast quantities of grain this year, and each season the Grand Trunk has made up new and greater records. I consider our terminal here Portland one of the best, and we are doing a big grain business than at present."

BIG ENDORSEMENT OF M'GREGOR PREDICTED

Closes Stormy Campaign as Candidate for Councillor in Fourth District.

Supporters of the campaign of Alexander McGregor for the Republican nomination for Councillor in the Fourth District declared confidently last night that Tuesday's primaries would result in the strongest kind of an endorsement for their candidate.

The supporters maintain that Mr. McGregor's campaign has been particularly unique for a man running simply for politics, especially since politics is generally the reason for the fact that he has been urged time and again to run for office and has steadily refused until they received strong endorsements. The campaign has been most satisfactory to its managers. With the primaries only two days away, the supporters of Mr. McGregor say that his campaign is now solidly entrenched throughout the Fourth Councillor District.

During the campaign Mr. McGregor has laid emphasis upon the plain qualities of honesty and fidelity as State servants, and has reiterated on the stump the following declaration of his candidacy:

Honesty and Fidelity.

"I realize the dignity of the office to which I aspire, also its responsibilities. I shall faithfully and honestly and well perform all the duties that may come to me. I shall be a faithful servant of the people, high servants of the State, and I will prove true to the trust reposed in me. All that I need say or promise is that, to the best of my ability, early and late, I will strive to promote all that tends for the welfare of all our people and the fame of our beloved Commonwealth.

"The campaign was really ended the way Mr. McGregor had made it plain to his friends that he believed that the welfare of the State should be the common issue, and that party lines should not be pledged to. He said in this regard: 'I am not a candidate. If I am foolishly elected to the Governor's Council, I shall always endeavor to do the right. And the tendency of the present age is toward the abolishment of the boss and the machine, and this is the great end for which we should all work, whether we be Republican, Democrats, Insurgents or anything else."

Favors Parcels Post.

Mr. McGregor has emphasized his belief that the will of the people should prevail. He has cited the passage by Congress of the Canadian reciprocity bill, which the American people wanted, even though the Senate was overwhelmingly opposed.

Mr. McGregor is heartily in favor of a parcels post.

"The establishment of a parcels post is a logical outcome of the country as a whole. It is sure to come ultimately."

CAMPBELL IS GUEST.

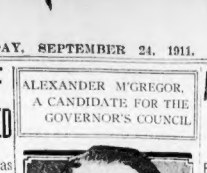
Clerk of Court Is Honored by Alumni Association.

Francis A. Campbell, clerk of the superior Civil Court and candidate for re-election on Tuesday, was the guest of complimentary banquet at the Hotel Bellevue last night by friends and members of the Mt. St. Mary's Alumni Association. In a brief address Mr. Campbell said he expects to be reconfirmed and re-elected. He said he had been endorsed by more than 2,000 members of both political parties in Boston and including some of the most prominent men in the city.

"The man who is a candidate against me," said Mr. Campbell, "has not been active except a feeble attack upon the business of the Grand Jury, which I head. For that I can only say that he is conspicuous as the only man who ever criticised the administration. Upon investigation of the charges I made no official misconduct, and to date, the records show that the other clerks of the sessions have not been indicted but one case during that period."

More Parkman Funds.

Boston's city treasury was enriched by $4,000 yesterday when Fred O. Colman, executor of the George F. Parkman estate, paid over the remaining $4,000 of the estate, including $25,000 income. This raises the total contributed to the Parkman estate for the Boston public park system to $1,081,894.



ALEXANDER McGREGOR

Mr. McGregor has won strong support on his unique campaign, standing for the nomination as Councillor in the Fourth district.

MAN AND A WOMAN IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Charles W. Brown of Woburn street, Reading, told the Malden police that he was injured in an automobile accident in North Broadway, Malden, near the Metropolitan, early yesterday morning, when he lost control of the steering gear and the machine overturned. Witnesses informed the police they had heard Brown's name called out and had noticed a young woman from the scene.

According to the information the young woman was pinned beneath the car, which had to be lifted to get her out. There was no injury given in the case and the driver left. Neither of the names of Brown nor of the woman who said he was Brown and had been hurt in the accident.

AXE HITS ROOSTER, SO QUINCY SLEEPS

Bill McInness' Noisy Fowl Goes on Chopping Block to Relief of Neighbors.

The neighbors of "Bill" McInness and his queer crowing rooster, "Chatham," along Moscow street in Atlantic, got together for a rousing thanksgiving meeting last night and Chet went to bed for their first night of real rest in many moons.

There were reasons, for although City Solicitor James McAnarney of Quincy headed down his decision yesterday that the Quincy authorities couldn't muzzle the rooster stop his crowing, "Shifters" by odd in a refrigerator all clocked and in readiness for a Sunday dinner today.

A week ago the same neighbors—eight in number—held a meeting on Monday, sent one policeman to the McInnesses and their cocky pet, petitioned Mayor Sinn of Quincy to put an end to the rooster's nocturnal noise-making. They said they had suffered much mental anguish, and would Mr. Mayor please give them some relief, etc., etc.

Mayor Sinn was puzzled. He referred the petition to the Board of Health. Dr. F. Raymond Burke, the board's fowl expert, called a special session. The members of the board were just as puzzled as the Mayor.

"We can't solve this barnyard rebus," they said, but put it up to Mr. McAnarney to see what could be done to the McInness chanticleer. Yesterday came with the final opinion.

There is no law to prevent this rooster from crowing, said the solicitor, and can't stop him. Would better tell the petitioners to kill the bird. Dr. Burke and Inspector Stubbs "Shifters" from making the night hideous with their cackling.

This is where Inspector Alfred W. Goodhue of Quincy Point comes in. Being acquainted with the McInnesses, he talked the matter over with them diplomacy that he was presented with "Shifters" for his Sunday dinner. With the rooster under his arm but still crowing, the inspector made his way to the neighbors' abodes. These Chief Burrell took the bird in hand, lopped off his head and in three minutes had him plucked in the rear of the police station.

Oelrich in Auto Crash.

NEWPORT, Sept. 23.—Herman Oelrich, Jr., who late claim to experience as a chauffeur, and who was dashing along Bellevue avenue today in a big racing car into a car driven by Charles A. Stewart with a couple of friends. Neither of the men with whom was some, was hurt, but their cars were badly smashed.

EX-TREASURER OF U. S. TAKEN IN RAID

Daniel H. Morgan of Bridgeport Arrested in Get-Rich-Quick Office.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—The stock brokerage office of Jared Flagg, who has been selling money from investors for enormous returns in stocks and guaranteeing 52 per cent a year payable weekly, was raided this afternoon by post-office inspectors, assisted by ten Central Office detectives.

In the office at No. 166 West Forty-first street at the time of the raid were a number of well-known men, who were made prisoners. Besides Flagg the captured men were E. Tenayuca Neely, a one-time police Hiher of Chicago; Daniel M. Morgan, formerly treasurer of the United States, whose home is in Bridgeport, Ct.; Alvin M. Higbie, a lawyer; the Rev. James T. Schorl, Joshua Downs, U. A. Schiller and Henry A. Jackson.

Assistant District Attorney Smith asked that Flagg be placed under $25,000 bail, and it was fixed at that sum. Mr. Smith explained in asking high bail that Flagg's connections were extensive and it was understood by the government that he had $1,000,000 "salted away." Bail for Daniel M. Morgan was set at $10,000.

Alvin M. Higbie, who was credited by Mr. Smith with having had control of Congressional legislation for the under-ground Western Note law, put under $10,000 bail, and Edward L. Boalliet was released in the sum of $5,000. Joshua Brown and the Rev. G. T. Schorl, described as clergymen, and Henry A. Jackson were put under bonds of $2,000.

Flagg has been operating for about 18 months, he has taken in more than $1,000,000 and that he adults he have more than 1,000 persons.

Flagg did not advertise. He allowed his customers to advertise for him. Letters would be referred to Mr. Morgan, who, to every one of long experience in the affairs of the United States, exerted a very strong influence.

An effort was made by Flagg and his lawyer to close the office safe, but the inspectors forestalled it. Books, papers and other documentary evidence were seized.

New Mystery in Hurd Romance

Disowned Son is Now Missing

NURSE WHO IS ENGAGED TO MALCOLM HURD

MISS BESSIE CHURCH.

Miss Church's engagement to the son of the vice-president of the United Shoe Machinery Company recalled in a paid newspaper advertisement in which Mr. Hurd, Sr., virtually disowned his son.

THE extraordinary Hurd case, wherein a millionaire father announces his disapproval of his son's choice of a bride in a paid advertisement in a newspaper, has resolved itself into a mystery. The mystery is what has become of Malcolm Hurd, the son? Nobody knows his whereabouts, if all that is said is true. By his family it is intimated that he has gone West. By the friends of Miss Edna Beatrice Church, the pretty nurse, whom Edward P. Hurd, the rich and stern father, does not want for a daughter-in-law, it is hinted that the young man is living in Boston or its suburbs, but is in seclusion.

It is known that after his father, who is vice-president of the United Shoe Machinery Company, ans now under indictment with other directors of that trust, advertised the fact that he opposed the marriage and wanted no wedding invitations sent to his family or friends, the young man put a few personal effects in a suit case and left his parental home at No. 508 Walnut street, Newton, for parts unknown. The Hurd family has also left the house, it is stated. It sought other and temporary quarters because of the notoriety occasioned by the elder Mr. Hurd's unique advertisement.

Mr. Hurd senior is a son of iron determination, as he had to be to survive as a Union soldier the horrors of imprisonment at Andersonville and other South pens, in the South during the Civil War. He drove reporters away from active in the trust quarters at No. 205 Lincoln street with threats of kicking them out, and there was no question but what he stood firm in opposition to his son's marriage to Miss Church.

As young Mr. Hurd, who is thirty-two years old, has for a heritage all his father's iron will, it is surmised that he will clinch over all hurdles set in his path to the altar.

Mutual friends say that Miss Church is much more affected by the senior Mr. Hurd's course in giving unprecedented publicity to his opposition to the wedding than her fiance. The son left home when his father strilled his disapproval of his matrimonial intentions. Miss Church is residing at present as companion nurse in the home of Mrs. L. A. Wilkie at No. 288 Elm street, Newtonville.

Nor is about twenty-five years old and is a slender, refined young woman who is said to resemble Mrs. William H. Taft.

The views of the three persons—father, son and bride-elect—in this verification of the Shakespearian adage, "The course of true love never did run smooth," have each expressed themselves firmly on the situation. Mr. Hurd, Sr., said:

"This is strictly a personal affair and I do not want anybody butting into my personal affairs. I don't care what the public thinks of my attitude toward my son."

Young Mr. Hurd, who has been employed in the cutter department of the United Shoe Machinery Company, said:

"The reason which my father has urged against my marriage is that I am sick. But I am not. I am willing to undergo a physical examination to prove the untruthfulness of my health."

Miss Church said:

"If Malcolm's father expected by publishing his disapproval of our marriage to influence people against us, it will not change our plans any."

As both young Mr. Hurd and Miss Church have decided not to be married by his father, the wedding will take place on October 28 in St. John's Episcopal Church in Newtonville. Rev. Richard Loring has been engaged to perform the marriage ceremony.

Miss Church is the daughter of a Nova Scotia clergyman and came here from her home there about five years ago. The home of Mrs. Wilkie, whose husband is a Boston attorney, is around the corner from the Hurd mansion. It is understood that Miss Church became acquainted with young Hurd by being his neighbor and that the courtship has reached the engagement phase before his father heard that his son was in love.

Acquaintances say that the father would never have published his advertisements of disapproval if the son had acceded to his request that no wedding invitations be sent to any friends of the Hurd family.

REYES GIVES UP IN FAVOR OF MADERO

Withdrawal of Insurgent General Offers Rival Clear Track for Mexican Presidency.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 23.—Foreshadowing action of the Mexican Congress defeating propositions to postpone the national election later than Oct. 1, General Bernardo Reyes, candidate for the presidency, has practically withdrawn from the race.

In an interview he said elections held Oct. 1 would be illegal because the country was not at peace and urged his followers not to vote. Both branches of Congress have received adverse reports from committees in charge of petitions looking to the postponing of the elections.

All reports stated that grounds for postponement were largely technical and the result of postponement now might be another civil war in Mexico. Petitions for deferring the elections were presented to the upper branch by the Reyistas and to the lower branch by the Revolutionists and the Permanent Commission of the Legislature of Aguas Calientes.

Quits for Country's Sake.

In an interview accorded L. Heraldo Mexicano, the venerable Warrior Reyes said he was not ignorant of the fact that if he wished to resort to arms it would be easy to overturn the existing order of things, but he gave assurances that he had no intention of endangering the country further. General Reyes said in part:

"The elections will not be legal. The country is not in a condition which will permit them to be held. If we completed in taking part in them, the partisans of Madero would have recourse to outrages of measures to impede our voting. Therefore, the Reyista party, the people revolutionists and others will have nothing to do with them."

Madero, to whom the decision of Reyes was conveyed at Cuatrocanos, telegraph, branding his action as a confession of failure to organize a political following. At the same time, he does not believe Reyes intends to submit tamely to being cheated out. He did not think that the people at large would attach much importance to the General's explanation of lack of guarantees of fair play, and added:

"The people will know to whom to attribute said whatever may be the attitude of General Reyes. It will fall, however, those of us who have fought for the principles of effective suffrage, no matter what General Reyes may employ."

Madero Remains Strong.

From a careful analysis of the recent and current political aspects in the republic it is difficult to escape the conclusion that Madero is as strong with the masses as he ever was. Probably he is stronger. It is positive that he has lost no ground. This being so, and assuming that, as every one admits, he could have been elected President immediately after the downfall of the Diaz administration, it is difficult to understand that any power will be placed in his hands next month.

MAYOR WILL OPEN DRUG CONVENTION

2,000 Stockholders of United Company Will Mingle Business and Pleasure Here.

Mayor Fitzgerald has agreed to open the convention of the United Drug Company at the Boston Arena Tuesday morning, October 3. After the 2,000 stockholders from every State in the union and from Canada and England have finished the affairs of their business, they will repair to Revere, where they will see an old-fashioned one-ring circus, with the old-time animals, clowns and freaks. This will be only one of a series of various fun-making episodes, with which the business of the company will be garnished. It will be the largest gathering ever held by the company.

Tuesday evening, October 3, the entire party will attend the performances of "The Red Widow" at the Colonial Theatre. The meeting Wednesday will be followed by the Revere outing. The Lenox City Club has been engaged for the purpose. Besides the business meetings, a number of events will be athletic sports, music, dancing and theatricals.

Banquet on Wednesday.

On Wednesday evening the annual banquet will take place in the Arena. Several prominent speakers will be present. Motor trips, shopping trips and side pleasure excursions will be conducted by special guides for the women.

The United Drug Company was organized some ten years ago by its president, Louis Liggett. It is now occupying on a floor space of 26,000 square feet. Today it extends over 10 acres. When the meeting ends they will open several large and handsomely appointed drug stores in this city.

One of the most recent achievements of the company is the establishment of a beautiful playground for the children in the district of the factory. It is located on one of the finest sites on Huntington avenue, nearly opposite the new Museum of Fine Arts. It is an ideal location because of the undeveloped open air space in the vicinity.

A Recreation Ground.

The equipment will be of the most fashionable and approved style, including a shelter house, express, horizontal bars, children's gardens and sand piles. The construction is under the supervision of Dr. T. W. Harrington, supervisor of playgrounds in the public schools, and Miss Fitzgerald, who has given his unqualified indorsement to the movement.

ANTI-FAT MEN TO MEET.

Conference of Progressives in Chicago October 16.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—A national conference of anti-Fat Republicans will be held in Chicago, October 16, to consider plans for conducting and developing the movement to establish some other man than the President as head of the national ticket in 1912.

FRANCE AND GERMANY NEAR AN AGREEMENT

Reply Sent to Berlin Thought to Differ Little From German Proposals.

PARIS, Sept. 23.—The cabinet met with President Fallieres at his residence in Rambouillet to-day when a French reply to Germany's latest suggestion for an agreement concerning Morocco, was approved unanimously. The reply was submitted by Premier Caillaux and Foreign Minister De Celves.

Since Germany's proposals were drawn after two long conversations between the German Minister of Foreign Affairs, Herr Von Kiderlin-Waechter, and the French Ambassador, M. Cambon, it will probably be found that France has accepted the arrangement proposed regarding Morocco. Itself, the question remaining for settlement being the details of the cession to Germany in French Congo.

M. De Celves sent the note to Berlin by courier to-night. The Temps learns that the French reply differs little from the terms of the German proposals. The paraphrase concerning public works in Morocco, the protection of natives under the patronage of the Germans and the jurisdiction of the consular courts have been replaced with greater precision.

WAVE OF REJOICING OVER THE DEFEAT OF RECIPROCITY SWEEPS THROUGH ENGLAND

LONDON, Sept. 23.—From one end of Britain to the other to-day there is one glad shout of rejoicing over the defeat of reciprocity with the United States. Even the Liberal organs, which loudly professed their attachment to any cause that leaded to bring the English speaking races closer together, can hardly conceal their secret glee over the fact that Canada has rejected the United States' offer of closer commercial ties.

Such phrases as "American conspiracy foiled," "Victory for the empire," "Canada still loyal," are to be seen on almost every editorial page, in newspaper headlines and on the large typed contents bills with which English journals herald their wares to the reading public.

The Daily Mail heads its article on the Canadian elections with "Victory for the Flag." The Express, next to the outdone in patriotism, heads its column in still larger type with "Saved to the Empire—Real Meaning of the Liberal Route to Canada." Our newspaper posters printed in letters 10 inches deep, offers to tell its readers "How the Empire was saved."

Everywhere the assumption prevails that the United States was playing a double game with Canada, that reciprocity was only the entering wedge for annexation, and that the Canadians, in rejecting it, have been guided by distrust or dislike of the United States and by loyalty to Great Britain. The same attitude is shown in expressions of English public men.

"Canada Refuses Bribe."

Sir Max Aitken, M. P., wires: "Canada has refused the bribe."

Sir Gilbert Parker says: "It was Canada's proud and she has delivered herself."

Bonar Law, M. P., telegraphs from Glasgow: "The proposed treaty would have been a disaster to the Empire."

Lord Willoughby de Broke says: "The lighted that Canada has not forgotten the old country."

Canada, Tyron, M. P., "The American attempt to undermine imperial preference and draw Canada away from the Empire has been decisively answered by the Canadian people."

The regrets of President Taft and the American press over the defeat of reciprocity carry headlines which fail to conceal the grief of their writers.

The Daily Mail under the caption "The Flag" has seen, says editorially:

"The result of the Canadian elections will be received with satisfaction throughout the empire. The British flag has triumphed. It is one of the most important events of our time and in progress as a tonic to the British people in the hour of internal strife and depression.

"In Montreal great crowds assembled and sang 'Rule Britania' and cheered for the flag. Similar scenes will be witnessed in the other great Canadian cities there were similar demonstrations of public joy.

"Of her own free will Canada has rejected the great offer which was made her. She has refused to imperil her destiny and her future for transient gain. By so doing she has rendered an incomparable service to the empire. Reciprocal trade relations must have strengthened the ties between her and the United States and by so doing placed the ties which link the Dominion to the British empire. At the parting of the ways she has made her fateful choice and she has chosen right."

"Snare Deftly Set."

The Express says:

"The snare was well and deftly set, but it was spread in sight of the bird and the artifice has been all in vain.

The Times says:

"The Canadian people have answered an old question in the old British way. The victory of Laurier's opponents after twenty years of opposition is far more than the victory of a party. It is the resurrection of the Canadian people of established faith from which they and we, their kindred, seem never to depart."

The Daily Telegraph says:

"Now that the verdict is given and given against reciprocity with a shout that will ring around the world, there is no reason why imperialists in the mother country should not give full and free appreciation to their colonial relief that the reciprocity agreement between Canada and the United States has not received a benediction. That particular blessing is withheld."

The Daily News (liberal) says:

"The appeal to imperialism and anti-American sentiment has met with considerable success in Ontario, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, where the United Empire loyalists, descendants of Royalist refugees from the United States, are strong. The inconsistency of expressed loyalty to the Empire and disloyalty to the United States, combined with the working affiliates with the Canadian Pacific Railway in Quebec, does not seem to have shocked Canadian constituencies."

"Verdict for All Time."

The Morning Standard says:

"From Nova Scotia to British Columbia, in commercial matters, and in all the great agricultural districts, there has been absolute unanimity in the verdict for all time. An overwhelming majority in favor of keeping it impossible. The English people have been given by signs that they understand the standing. Not in spite of all discouragement. Not in spite of the fact that the Canadian government could not be induced to give by one illusory moment of temporary relief the assurance that reciprocity would be settled in the hooting of the bonds between the United States and Canada.

"It was a tempting bait that was offered to the Canadians and in face of the attitude of the British cabinet since 1900, it would have been difficult to blame the Canadian electors had succumbed to the tempting of Washington. That the effort to seduce them has failed so disastrously, is eloquent evidence of Canada's pride of nationality and confidence in her own destiny. In the case of two countries with common language and artificial boundary it is difficult to imagine any other commercial tie of this kind would fail to benefit profoundly both nations. Of course Canada would inevitably begin to look to the United States for her population and even though remaining nominally British, would have become practically annexed, in the selfish and in culture. But to Canada's interest in our own and in the interest of humanity at large."

"Defeat for Taft."

The Globe says:

"To Mr. Champ Clark and gentlemen of his kidney we owe a debt of gratitude. While Cobdenite newspapers at home were assuming the public that annexation was a dream of the past and that all that was at issue was a simple economic question, those frank and intelligent Americans declared the U. S. was crossed its 'Ts in Mr. Taft's offer.

"Few thinking men can doubt that if the proposed commercial union, for that is what it amounted to, had been carried, and United States came into existence every man would have become different. In every day to resist some sort of political union with Britain. Reciprocity with Canada would draw closer and closer politically as well as commercially to the United States and further and further away from the British empire. That there is more than doubting if the average Canadian elector would have realized the danger if the rotting parades in the states had not produced so comic and so ready at the prospect.

"The Morning Post says:

"All who believe in the cause of imperial unity will rejoice at the decision of the Canadian election. It is a crowning victory, more decisive and more complete than even the most ardent tariff reformer dared hope it to be. Any woman can get these ingredients at her drug-store, put them together, and use the solution with entire safety. To bathe the face in the same brings immediate results, even in case of the severest wrinkles and furrows. The lotion is also effective for hanging cheeks and double chin.

SANDWICH ISLANDERS LOYAL, SAYS COTTER

Well-Known Boston Lawyer Brings Home Pleasant Impressions from the Pacific.

After a tour of the Hawaiian Islands on professional business, James R. Cotter, the well-known Boston lawyer, has returned to Boston benefitted by his Pacific ocean voyages and full of praise for the people and for the country of his experiences. In company with Judge Stillman of New York, Mr. Cotter was in Honolulu on legal matters concerning the development of one of the large sugar plantations on the island of Maui, one of the islands which forms a part of the group. On the return trip he was a reporter for the Sunday AMERICAN, Mr. Cotter said:

"We left Honolulu on August 2 and, by a strange coincidence, sailed from Honolulu on September 2. Our 2,100-mile voyage was a most delightful one. It was smooth and delightfully comfortable. The Pacific is a rather ocean than the Atlantic and the weather is warmer. On the trip out from Frisco the officers, sailors and passengers were obliged to put off all their clothing and to wear none but the lightest.

"Our fellow passengers were chiefly missionaries going to China and Japan. Among them were the Rev. Dr. Smith and wife from Toledo, O., who were going to Japan to continue the work begun there by Archbishop O'Connell.

"There were also several Protestant missionaries, some bound going to Shanghai, others to Japan. It was a pleasure to meet them. Among the foreign government officials bound for the Philippines to fill positions in the constabulary.

Ship's Servants Chinese.

"It will interest you, maybe to know that on board our steamer the sailors, the stewards, the table attendants in the dining room, were all Chinamen. And I must say my impression of the Chinese is much more favorable towards that race than before. They are industrious, polite and obedient. I found such to be the case, also in the hotels on the Hawaiian Islands, where there is the most cordial harmony between the Japanese and Chinese.

"The native citizens of Honolulu and all over the islands have a great deal of confidence in the stability and integrity of the Chinese than they have in the Japanese. The Japs are very independent

Harvard to Test Strength in Game with Bates Eleven

Nearly Every Man in Coach Haughton's Squad Will Be Given a Chance to Prove His Mettle in Big Football Season's Opening Battle, Scheduled for Next Saturday in the Stadium

A big feature of next Sunday's AMERICAN will be a World Series Section, with pictures of the New York and Philadelphia stars, "dope" on the players, the probable outcome of the games and sketches of the managers and athletes

Harvard's great end, S. Felton, Jr., who will do the bulk of the team's punting this season. His kicking ability practically assures him a regular place on the Crimson team.

By TED PARKE.

With the first game of the season on next Saturday, followers of the Harvard team await impatiently the announcement of the line-up of the eleven which will start the initial game with Bates, the only Maine team played this year in the Stadium. Perhaps there is more interest in the first line-up of the Crimson team than there has been in seasons past, for the reason there are so few veterans left along the line where the strength of the team must necessarily lie in a great degree.

The choice of the line players will be a hard one for the Harvard coaches. There is a great abundance of material for these positions, but none of it can be said to be up to the standard of recent years, either in weight or size, although there is plenty of ability shown by the men who are scrapping it out for the coveted positions. The problem of how to build up a line from clever men who lack some of the primary requisites of first-class players for these positions—weight and size—is peculiar.

To be sure, the men who first get into the game with Bates will not necessarily be the ones to hold the positions during the entire season. The early games Harvard plays each year are on the schedule to enable the coaches to try out their material in real action.

In the first game it is probable that almost every man on the first squad, which was chosen on last Wednesday, will be given a chance during this contest. Coach Haughton and his corps of assistants will be able to draw their conclusions as to the relative ability of the candidates.

Coach Haughton will know by next Thursday or Friday what men are in the best shape, and then he will be able to select his starting line, but the first line-up will not be particularly significant.

Since it is almost certain that every one on the first squad will be able to play against Bates, it will hardly be worth while trying to dope out what men will go into the game first. The idea is to discover what men will ultimately be chosen to hold down the different positions.

That the Crimson team will have the work cut out for it, is a fact well known to Coach Haughton and close followers of the great college sport.

As always, the defeat of Yale in the goal sought by the Cambridge team. The upholding of gridiron honors means more to the Harvard players than their three regular meals and a place to sleep. They are accountable to the former students at the college as well as those of the present and as a member of an eleven which beats old Eli, their glory will be written in history.

As the backfield is the easiest question to settle, let us look at that first.

Morrison, first substitute fullback last year, is not a whit less of a player than he was last Fall. He has weight, speed and a clear knowledge of both the offence and defence. That he will be the man for this position seems fairly certain. T. H. Frothingham, who is somewhat heavier and the same type of back, although possibly not so fast, and E. A. Graustein, a sub last year, frequently referred to as the "human bullet." Graustein is good, but Campbell seems to have it on him somewhat in headwork. Bettle, one of the freshman backs last year, has not yet had much opportunity to show his metal, and is very keen competition.

Wendell, All-American halfback last year and the marvel of the Harvard backfield in every sort of play, is in as good shape as ever, and has gained rather than lost in speed. His place is assured.

CAMPBELL MAY BE HALF.

One of the halfback jobs is alone in doubt. For this Campbell seems to be the most promising. He is light, weighing slightly over 150 pounds, but what he lacks in weight he more than makes up in speed and cleverness in running through a broken field. His great specialty last year when in the game was the skin tackle play, on which he usually snapped by the opposing ends and tackles for good gains. His greatest rivals are T. Frothingham, who is somewhat heavier and the same type of back, although possibly not so fast, and E. A. Graustein, a sub last year, frequently referred to as the "human bullet." Graustein is good, but Campbell seems to have it on him somewhat in headwork. Bettle, one of the freshman backs last year, has not yet had much opportunity to show his metal, and is very keen competition.

Wigglesworth, the regular quarter last year, still has the call over Potter and Gardner, although all of them are running a close race for the job. It does seem as if Potter is the coolest headed of the three and at times a little headier than his running mates, but "Wigg" probably will lend the trio till one of his followers shows some remarkable case, giving way to them at times.

Smith, a veteran end, has his job at the left of the line finished, while Felton, being tried at the other end, seems ready to put in strong bid to alternate between the end and halfback and this year his punting ability will be an added reason for his services on the team.

FISHER SURE OF JOB.

Captain Fisher is sure of one of the guard positions. The other guard is going to be hard to decide upon. Hitchcock, freshman guard last year, is an active, clever man and fairly heavy. If he comes out soon he may be in condition to get into the first game. If he continues to show up as well as he did last year there is every reason to believe he will be a strong bidder for the position. His two strongest competitors will be Keays and McGuire. McGuire has a tendency, altogether too pronounced, toward the former "Harvard fat-boy" type, while Keays doesn't really seem to understand his position.

It would not be at all surprising to see McGuire start the game at guard, unless Hitchcock returns in time. It will be a long time before Keays is polished sufficiently to be called a real guard, for his work has always been

BROWN CANDIDATES ROUND INTO FORM

Coaches Divide the Men Into Two Squads for Early Work.

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 23.—Hard practice today, both in the morning and after noon, completed the second week of preliminary work for the Brown University football squad at Andrews Field, and showed the many candidates rounding into form in an encouraging manner. About twenty-five men have reported to Coach Robinson and Assistant Coach Pryor and as many more are expected soon.

The candidates have been divided into two squads for workouts, the veterans being coached by Robinson, while Pryor has charge of the new men. The work thus far has consisted of signal drill, kicking, running down punts and falling on the ball. With the form shown by the men so far, Coach Robinson expects to send the two squads against each other in a short scrimmage soon. The men are, for the most part, in good condition, and anxious for a chance to go against each other in a real mix up.

Three New Men Report.

The latest players to report are three in number, two new men and a Brownie who is trying a try-out next year. Early prospects as to the probable strength of this year's Brunonian team as compared with last year's exceptional eleven, seem to indicate the 1911 line will be fully as strong as that of the team which whipped Yale last Fall, while the backfield will not quite measure up to that standard. With Captain McKay and "Jake" High out, practically a whole new backfield will have to be developed. For the three positions Marble and Bean, substitutes last year are the most promising candidates. Marble at half and Bean at full.

Two new men, Tenney and Jones, also are showing well, and one of them doubtless will occupy the third position. At quarter, Captain Sorsekling, last year's all-American, reigns supreme, with Whitmarsh of last year's freshman team, for an emergency man. Crowther, who played a whole new backfield will have to be developed. For the three positions Marble and Bean, substitutes last year are the most promising candidates. Marble at half and Bean at full.

Five Veterans in Line.

On the line five of last year's men are available, Adams, Ashbaugh, Krais, Goldberg and Kulp, and with these men to steady the wealth of green material a really formidable line should be developed. Veith, a junior, who was ineligible last year, has worked off his conditions and is practically certain of one of the tackle positions.

Among the new men who are seeking positions on the line are Higgins, West, Hubbard, Murphy, Metcalf and Rosenberg of last year's sophomore team, and Bahl, Donovan, Hazard of the 1910 freshman eleven.

A great deal of time will have to be spent on kicking, none of the candidates seeming to stand out as especially proficient. Tenney, Bean and Marble are being worked hard at the st present.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL OPENS THIS WEEK

By REX.

The football season of [illegible] formally inaugurated this week when each of the leading elevens will go into action, Harvard taking on Bates, Brown Princeton getting its start against Stevens the same day, while Yale has two games, one with Wesleyan next Wednesday and another with Holy Cross on Saturday. Cornell is to open its season Wednesday with Allegheny.

Upon the outcome of games "big" games depends, it may be said, the supremacy of the East. Three games are as follow:

Nov. 4—Harvard vs. Princeton.
Nov. 11—Dartmouth vs. Princeton.
Nov. 11—Brown vs. Yale.
Nov. 18—Yale vs. Princeton.
Nov. 18—Dartmouth vs. Harvard.
Nov. 25—Yale vs. Harvard.
Nov. 30—Cornell vs. Pennsylvania.

Compare by Scores

Neither Pennsylvania nor Cornell meets Harvard, Yale or Princeton, and any comparative scores can be used to base a reasoning should the Ithacans or the Quakers on the face of their showing for the season, seem to deserve a place among the leaders of Eastern football. Pennsylvania plays Brown October 21, and the result of that game will furnish the only basis for comparison.

As between Harvard Princeton and Yale, however, followers of football will have results on which to base their hopes on the season, with the climax coming when the Harvard battle of [illegible] Coach Haughton has an unenviable task. It may be said, in turning out a team that will equal the record of the other cohorts of 1910. Bowdoin Withington, who is back to help round out the team, Haughton has lost Minot, McKay, Smith and Lewis, a formidable set of linemen. The work of drilling a new set of men into a cohesive force, which gives the Pennsylvania, is only one part of the job that confronts him.

Play Two Hard Games

Two games of supreme importance are on the cards, and the long period of three weeks intervenes between the two Harvard meeting Princeton November 4, and Yale November 25. Then the Crimson team must be put in edge twice during the seven-week period by a month in which the danger of the men's becoming stale must be warded against.

Yale, on the other hand, works up to a real climax in its schedule. The Blue's battle with Princeton comes on November 18—one week before the Harvard game. Coach Field, who has been rounding up his candidates for the opening game with Wesleyan next Wednesday, has a strong frame on which to build his eleven. Phil Baker, Kelley, Howe and Merritt, veterans, will be on hand to make up the backfield.

Prospects are reported good at Princeton. Halfback Pendleton, the star performer for the Tigers last year, already has shown form, according to information from the New Jersey seat of learning, and in addition to him and Captain Hurt, there are enough men of last year's varsity squad on hand to make Coach Roper's annually drilling his force [illegible]

PENN TRIES NEW TRAINING STUNT

Men Are In Good Shape from Preparatory Work at Their Homes.

PHILADELPHIA Sept. 23.—With less than half a dozen of last year's stars on deck and the task of building up a new team this year, the University of Pennsylvania football coaches are confident of making good on the 1911 schedule, which begins on September 30 with Gettysburg on Franklin Field.

Men In Good Shape

"We shall have players to report in good condition [illegible] Thursday," said Coach [illegible] afternoon. "The squad now [illegible] players, all of whom are in [illegible] better by far than we expected, and our present system of training the men at home seems to be a successful innovation.

"With such coaches as Dr. Williams, Hugh Wharton, Dr. Scarlett, Gus Ziegler, H. Gaston, Dr. Mulford, Al Miller and George Brooke, we now have a team almost ready to take the field.

"Our team this year will be light, but fast, and we are training our best record today. I think the new six basketball idea originated by Mike Murphy, is one of the best training methods tried in football—it is especially good when speed is required."

This Year's Schedule Light.

Penn's schedule is light this year, giving he Red and Blue ample time for the big [illegible] of the season. The first [illegible] on October 21 and are followed by [illegible] Indiana, Lafayette, Michigan [illegible]

RUSTLERS DELIVER KNOCKOUT TO CUBS

Boston Wins, 14-6, and Practically Kills Chance's Hope for Pennant.

By CHARLES DRYDEN.

CHICAGO, Sept. 23.—Those ridiculous Rustlers kicked the stuffing out of seventeen Cubs, mostly pitchers, yesterday, beating them 14 to 6. It was a fearful show to look at, but the athletes managed to close out the doing by smiling.

Southpaw Tyler held the Cubs to nine hits and numerous passes, while four home pitchers were slammed fourteen times. The Giants cleaned the Reds once more and the case looks hopeless. McInire, Bowman, Richter and Toney did much to puff the batting averages of the enemy.

Fred Toney blandly trotted out all his celebrities for preliminary practice so that the Cubs could enjoy them. Al Bridwell, Doc Miller, J. Kling, Mike Donlin and Mr. Toney, himself, cavorted on the green sod. Cy Young, the well-known farmer of Paoli, Ohio, batter some fungoes in his best style and Bill Sweeney spoke to some of people he knew. Printed notices introducing these celebrities have been hanging on the grandstand for several days and it was the duty of the said celebrities to line up to their lithographs created by Secretary C. Williams.

Diamond Harry made a good impression on Bill Sweeney by passing him at the start of the game. Doolin singled to right. The ball got by Schulte and both runners gained an extra base. Jackson doubled to right centre, scoring two runs. Kling went out, short to first, and Jackson scored on Miller's pop hit to left field. Wolfe threw Bridwell out and Hauser scored on Suter. Southpaw Tyler [illegible] Schulte in the last of the first. Miller banked against the screen in [illegible] and [illegible] intended homer [illegible] of the sky with one hand. CORNELL TO HAVE VETERAN ELEVEN

Only Four Places to Fill from Squad of Sixty Candidates.

ITHACA, Sept. 23.—Cornell football practice received an impetus during the last week, and already it is observed many of the veteran players are as far advanced in training as they were last year when they quit work. The warm weather has made long scrimmages impossible.

Such veterans as Quarterback Butts Champlain, Whyte, Munk, Delano and O'Rourke have retained their prowess attained under Reed last year and start in with the advantage of previous training. With the return of O'Rourke, Halfback Connor and End Eyrich, the veteran squad is here and the coaches are delighted with the outlook for good material. There are only four places on the team now that are filled by new men. These are the three places of the men who graduated last year and Right Tackle Weekes, who finds that he cannot play

Freshman Backfield Good.

Last year's freshman team presents a good backfield to take the place of last year's men in Hill and Hawkins, and the freshman ends have also been used on the first team during the week. They are Rees and Dwyer. Rees is left end, but probably will give way to Eyrich, who will be in condition in a few days. Eyrich is the drop kicker of the team and will be ready to advantage during many of the close games. Rees probably will be his substitute if he continues to improve, as he has a good advantage during the scrimmages already held.

Lawrence and Schen, the hockey men, have been playing the right end on the two scrimmage teams and may prove to be the regular selections, unless some other candidate shows better calibre. The return of Eyrich, however, was hailed with delight, as there appears to be no doubt he will be the regular man if he keeps in condition.

O'Rourke also is expected to add strength to the line. He may be used at either tackle or guard. He is a big fellow and experienced, and his brother, the older brother, Barney, the new popular assistant coach. O'Rourke may be used in place of Weekes at right tackle, but I hasspain last year's left guard has been playing the position most of the time to date, Ursula Munk will retain his place at left tackle.

O'Connor in Backfield.

Franklin and Delano have been playing the guard positions. They were last year's substitutes. Hale, who played in many of the games at right guard has been playing on the second team. Franklin is working out to much better advantage and may be a regular unless Hale has improved

Whyte has been holding his own at center. He has been in every lineup of the first team and probably will enjoy that position for the season. His opponents are Miller and Smith.

Backfield candidates are expected from Quarterback Butler this year. He has been in every scrimmage and showed wonderful powers of generalship as well as an ability to run and hang on to the ball when in play. Butler is a veteran of the ground for a halfback. He may not be added from

Wylie has been a good addition to the backfield. He worked with Bates last year and during the season developed fine punting ability. He was not quite as heavy as Robb, who graduated. The latter's punting has been played to date by it is White and Hawkins, the latter a member of last year's freshman squad. These men have done well, but O'Connor, with his experience is expected to be worth more in the end.

Hill, the lone freshman fullback, has been used in that position on the first team since practice began and is doing well. He is a hard plunger and has developed for position, as the two regulars of last year's team showed no ability as a substitute last year and has now risen to the second string. Hill seems to be the most popular candidate to date.

TUFTS IN FIRST WORKOUT.

Coach Tobin Gives Men Light Practice on Friday.

The Tufts squad was given its first scrimmage Friday, which lasted about an hour. The dummy also made its first appearance, and a little time was devoted to tackling. Adams and Webber did the kicking to give the backs practice. The kicking of Adams was the best seen on a Tufts field for some time. Signal practice was undertaken for the first time, the men being run through some of the simpler formations. Tobin is having great stress on the use of the forward pass and drills the men daily at it. The new men, Freeman and Davis, came out yesterday

VETERANS RETURN TO WESLEYAN TEAM

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Sept. 23.—With all but three of last year's team back in college and with plenty of promising material in the freshman class, the indications are that the Wesleyan football team will be the strongest in many years. Hilen, halfback for the last four years, is still in college, but is ineligible, while Wright and Sutherland, last year's ends, were graduated. Practice started on September 11, more than a dozen men responding to the first call. The squad has been increased to thirty-five.

The coaching staff at Wesleyan will be the strongest in the history of the college. Head Coach Harry Parkin will be assisted by Dr. Enever, the new physical director, who is a former Amherst star, and A. M. A. Secretary Logue, who played on the Wesleyan freshman team for four years. In addition a number of graduates are expected from time to time to assist in directing the work.

With so many candidates for the different positions no one is assured of a place on the team, with the exception of Captain Mitchell, who will again play center. Baron, last year's quarter and star punter, will in all probability play the same position this year, although Sage, a new man, is showing up well as a punter.

For the other backfield positions, there are many candidates. Pettibone, who played halfback two years ago, but was out of the game because of faculty restrictions last season, will play again. Laggren, Eustis and Wentworth, all of whom have had a year's experience, are also out for the positions. The new men who are being given a tryout are Whiting, Johnson and Bowman.

HOLY CROSS SEES SEASON OF TRIUMPH

WORCESTER Mass., Sept. 23.—Prospects for one of the strongest and speediest football elevens this city has had in years, one at Holy Cross, and the other at Worcester Academy, are now brighter than ever. Interested in this line of sport are predicting at least two victories for the former aggregation out of the four big games between Harvard, Yale, Princeton and Dartmouth which helps make up their schedule this season. At the present time the Holy Cross eleven is in excellent shape, having had nearly three weeks of hard practice under Coach Timothy F. Larkin, and despite their opening game of the season on Pilton Field yesterday afternoon, having as their opponents the Boston College team, while the Worcester Academy football squad was given its first real workout on Gaskill field Thursday.

Holy Cross has practically the hardest schedule of any of the colleges in the country this year when it is considered that it has not the available material to pick from as have Harvard, Yale and other big colleges, where as a rule there are enough men to form two or more teams. With practically a full team of veterans and a squad of candidates which includes some of the fastest of prep. school football players, the local Jesuit college will have a team that under ordinary conditions would be the peer of the fastest minor college teams on the gridiron, but the hard schedule arranged has caused many chances to be made which will strengthen the team immensely and practically place it in the big five class.

HOLY CROSS DRUBS BOSTON COLLEGE, 13-0

Worcester Eleven Allows Visitors No Chance to Score In Season's Opener.

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. [illegible]. By clever team work and punting, Holy Cross today defeated the Boston College eleven in the first game of the season played on Fresh Field. The all-around work of the Purple and White proved a safety at the start [illegible] and from then on there an opportunity given the visitors to [illegible]

Waltham High Downs Natick Eleven, 12 to 0 In Hard Fought Game

BY OTTO B. HANSON

Waltham High [illegible] afternoon, beating the Natick High [illegible] spectators were treated [illegible] lines all the time [illegible]

It was only after [illegible] to take the game. [illegible] held the Watch City [illegible] won the game. The Natick [illegible] could not do a thing [illegible] tick punted out and was never in danger again in that period.

The first score was made early in the second period. Waltham recovered a punt close to the Natick goal line and on the next play Cobb, the giant tackle, pushed the ball over on a tackle-around play. Cotton failed to kick the goal.

No scoring was done in the second period. Natick broke through the Waltham line from the forty yard line for a touchdown, but one of its players was offside in the play and was ruled back. The play deceived the Natick followers and they criticised the officials.

Waltham Scores a Safety.

The Waltham team scored [illegible] period. The centre threw the ball over the quarter back's head and the man was thrown behind the line. The touchdown was the result of a neatly executed forward pass that netted the Watch City an almost twenty yards and two successive rushes, Cobb carrying the pigskin over. Cotton again failed to kick the goal.

Both teams punted frequently and the forward pass was put [illegible] by both teams. The Natick boys pulled off [illegible] forward passes that netted them good gains, but they [illegible] get the ball within striking distance. The Natick [illegible] play with [illegible] carrying the ball was again the strong spot of the Waltham attack and this play proved to be the most ground gainer. Cobb was the star for the Natick lineup and at times swept them off their feet, but [illegible] men pierced hard for [illegible] and spilled him over several times. A few trick plays were tried, but did not result in any big gains for either team.

The Natick team play was better than that of Waltham. The Waltham line was full of holes at times and the Natick linesmen broke through several times and got the runners before any gain was made. Natick's line men were smaller than Waltham's but were in the game for all they were worth.

Doherty is Star of Game.

The individual playing must be handed to Doherty. He [illegible] and topped eight of the Natick team. He was in the game [illegible] minutes, and it was partly through [illegible] playing that the Natick [illegible] gain. In fact, he got into every [illegible] at the other end was [illegible] got [illegible] on the Natick [illegible] Watch City [illegible] In the right [illegible] Waltham [illegible] and [illegible] responsible [illegible] also played a good game [illegible]

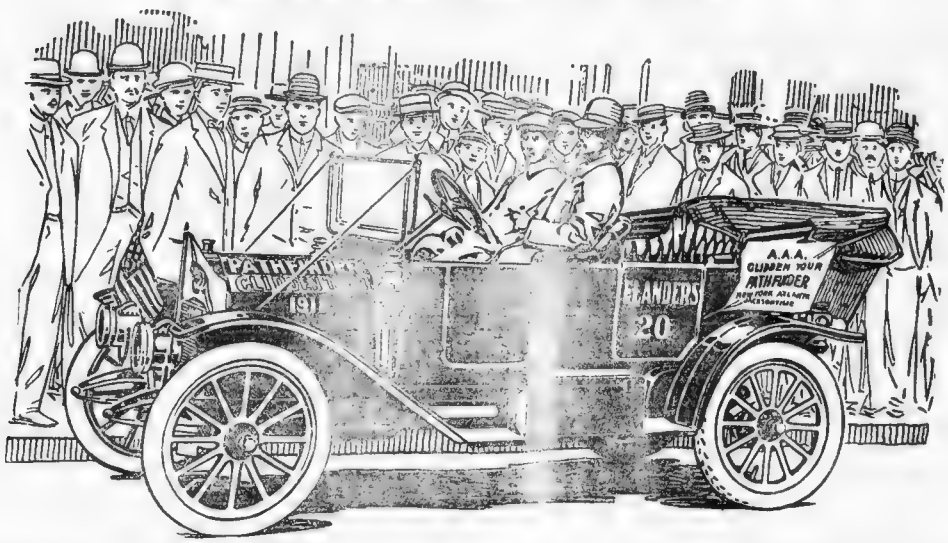
This Flanders "20" Is the Car That Laid Out the Glidden Route

It Is the Lightest and Lowest Priced Car That Ever Performed the Feat—and It Did It Better—Made Better Time and Finished in Better Condition.



WHEN MR. S. M. BUTLER, Chairman of the Contest Board of the American Automobile Association, first saw the Flanders "20" with which driver "Bill" Soules had been instructed to report at A. A. A. Headquarters in New York to lay out the route for the Glidden Tour to Jacksonville, Florida, he exclaimed:

"THERE MUST BE SOME MISTAKE! Surely you do not expect this little car to carry four passengers and cover the route in the time at our disposal? You see there are only 36 days between now and the date the tour must start, and maps, booklets and other data must be gotten out. We can't allow more than sixteen days of that for the pathfinding."

"WHY, WHAT DID YOU EXPECT, MR. BUTLER?" asked Driver Soules, who feared he had misunderstood his instructions—and Soules never does that.

"WHY I EXPECTED an E-M-F '30'—the old war horse that has laid out so many routes. I surely did not expect a smaller car and I am surprised that W. E. Flanders, Manager of the Studebaker automobile business would risk his and their reputation with the 9,500 dealers of the Studebaker Corporation in such an important event on so light a car. What will a 20 horse-power car do on the slippery clay roads of North Carolina and the sand trails of Florida? Why—!"

"WHAT WILL SHE DO?" asked Soules—now thoroughly on his mettle—"I'll tell you what she'll do, Mr. Butler: She'll make the $5,000 cars that have laid out former Glidden Tours look like thirty cents—plugged

"WHAT WILL SHE DO?—you say you can only allow sixteen days: that's an average of eighty-five miles per day. We—this little three speed car and me—will take your official party over that route on the tour schedule—that's ten days—and we will give them as comfortable a ride as they ever had—and we won't be late for supper once."

"YOU'RE ALL RIGHT, SOULES," exclaimed the Chairman enthusiastically now. "You have the right spirit and it is very evident you believe in your Flanders '20.' Go to it—and if you do the trick, hanged if I won't buy one—I begin to like the looks of her. She certainly is a trim looking little rig."

DRIVER SOULES was pleased—but he took issue with the Chairman on one point. She isn't so 'little,' Mr. Chairman—she has 102 inch wheel base; will carry five just as easily as four, and we'll show you there's the biggest 20 horse-power under that bonnet you ever saw in a car."

WELL, TO MAKE A LONG STORY SHORT, she did it and she did it magnificently. Each succeeding day when Pathfinder Westgard wired the head office the surprise of Chairman Butler and his associates became greater

ON SEPTEMBER 11th Mr. Bruce, Manager of the A. A. A. Touring Bureau wrote in part as follows: "We have today received a telegram from Mr. A. J. Westgard, our special representative, saying the Flanders car made the trip yesterday from Gettysburg to Staunton, a distance of 170 miles—a splendid performance considering that the road detail is being taken all the way for map making * * * will not you arrange to have the Flanders '20' continue after finishing the Glidden route, and come up from Jacksonville thru Savannah to Charlotte, connecting North and South by the Shenandoah Valley, Charlotte, Columbus, Augusta and Savannah." We wired, "Glad to do it, or to continue the route to Panama or the Pacific Coast—it's all the same to the sturdy Flanders car."

NOW THIS IS ONLY ONE of several great feats the new three speed Flanders "20" has performed during these past few weeks. We set out to show that in this three speed, fore-door model we have a car that has not a superior in the world—and not an equal outside of our own E-M-F "30," the staying qualities, speed and hill climbing ability of which is so well known that it no longer needs demonstrating.

JUST LISTEN TO THIS: Flanders "20" has won every event she has entered—has more reliability runs, more hill climbs to her credit than any other car this season. Not a day passes but she adds one or two more victories to her credit—one or two more trophies to her collection.

Flanders "20" Wins

1. THREE PERFECT ROAD SCORES IN IOWA'S LITTLE GLIDDEN. Every Flanders "20" entered drove the long hard run without a single penalty

2. FIRST AND SECOND PRIZES IN THE GREAT TWIN CITY TO HELENA, MONTANA, RELIABILITY RUN. 1,300 miles over the trackless trails. The Flanders forded streams, swung through sage brush "faster than a coyote" as they say out in Montana. When the scores were all in and the big $4,000 cars showed the best they could do, the judges came to the Flanders "40" and stopped. The proof was there. So Flanders "20" came home again rejoicing, first and second prizes.

3. HERE'S THE FLANDERS "20" AT SPEED ON THE HILLS Clipped 47 seconds off a two years' old record of 3 minutes and 5 seconds at the National Dead Horse Hill Climb at Worcester, Mass. Now the record is 1:18. Only one 20 horsepower car in the entire field drove as fast. Flanders "20" distanced everything in her class, and almost everything out of it and was the lowest priced car in the contest. Just a stock car, but she simply had the speed and power, and the second car in the Flanders' event was over half a minute behind

4. AND YET AGAIN! Flanders "20" wins the 800-mile St. Louis to Kansas City Reliability Run. Score, 998. Two points penalty only for loose nut on fender. Four days of heavy driving in sand and mud and Flanders "20" worked perfectly throughout run. So she won again and once more defeated many cars of far greater size and price.

5. BUFFALO ENDURANCE RUN, THE STIFFEST RUN OF THE SEASON. Four days of mud in hilly Western New York, and every day calling for almost 200 miles drive. The Flanders "20" had a great chance to show her stamina and speed it, winning in her class. Only one other car out of all the entries did as well and the contesting cars ran in cost up to three times the price of the Flanders.

6. ALMOST BEST OF ALL. FLANDERS "20" WINS AT THE NEWPORT HILL CLIMB IN INDIANA. This wasn't a sanctioned meet just a little meeting arranged by Indiana dealers throughout the state who knew how stiff a grade was in the Newport Hill and who wanted to find out how their cars really would climb. The dealers themselves drove When the astonishment died away all Indiana knew that the Flanders had again gone far out of her class and raced everything in the state that could get up the hill on any speed. Four of six events for the Flanders "20" A 90 horsepower Knox beat her 9 seconds in the free-for-all, but the Flanders "20" trimmed it a day's play by cleaning up in the class for cars selling from $2,000 to $3,000

7. ANOTHER RACE, this time in Des Moines, Iowa, gave Flanders "20" a chance to show her heels to the rest of them. Two specially built racing cars, a Ford and a Kissel car, both larger than the Flanders, and one of 50-horse-power, undertook to show the way in a five-mile race held by dealers. Well, they couldn't do better than second and third, for a Flanders "20" was taken out of stock the day before the race and they never caught her. First for the Flanders "20" on a half mile track. Five miles in 8 minutes, 7 seconds.

8. TODAY THE FLANDERS "20" IS ON THE LAST STAGE OF A 1,600-MILE TRIP FROM SEATTLE, WASH., TO HAZELTON, BRITISH COLUMBIA. No automobile, no wagon even ever traversed those mountainous and tangled trails A great prize is offered by the Hazelton authorities for the car which shall pioneer the highway one day to connect the two cities. The prize offered has been ready for two years with none willing to attempt the feat Today the Flanders has forced her way through the dense forests and rocky wastes of the unknown sections of that country, hewed out their way. The car pulled through Perhaps another page in this paper will tell you that the long journey is ended, but watch for it The story of the Flanders "20" is a story of wonderful achievements

WITHIN EIGHT WEEKS SHE HAS WON EIGHT important events—enumerated in the panel. In one she made three perfect road scores out of a possible three; in another, Minneapolis to Helena Reliability Run, she won first and second—all the prizes there were. And at Worcester, Mass., she won America's premier hill climbing event, chipping 47 seconds off the previous record and beating the time of several cars of four and five times her price

IF YOU FOLLOWED THE NEWS you have doubtless been struck by the consistent performance of this car in all reliability events To say that Flanders "20" is entered in a reliability event is to say Flanders "20" has won First—and most likely Second and Third also. Always first thru.

THAT'S WONDERFUL WHEN YOU CONSIDER that in these events, while entered only in her own class, her merit scores at the end make those of cars in the higher priced classes look cheap indeed.

TAKE THE TWIN CITY RUN—Minneapolis to Helena, Montana, over prairie trails and mountain passes, in which such cars as Packard, Stoddard-Dayton, Abbott-Detroit, Simplex, Maxwell, Cole, Krit, Hupmobile and other cars failed to finish with perfect scores, and two out of three Flanders "20's" did.

IS PRICE ANY INDICATION of the road ability, the staying qualities, the reliability and the capacity for standing hard knocks?—surely not in view of these splendid victories of this "20" horse-power $800 car.

NO, IT CERTAINLY IS NOT—we have never claimed that the E-M-F "30" was a better car than the three speed Flanders "20." The thirty is a little larger—ten inches longer wheel base, will go faster—say 55 miles per hour as against the 47 that any Flanders Touring car will go; but it won't—and no car made will—climb a hill better; it won't—and no car made will—stand rougher usage or perform so well month in month out with so little care or attention or expense.

FLANDERS "20" IS MADE OF SAME high grade steels—the best the science of metallurgy knows how to produce—by the same careful methods and in the largest plant in the world devoted to the making of one model. We make every part—"from pig iron and the raw steel bar to the finished car." And we guarantee every car for a year, giving the buyer a bond signed by General Manager Walter E. Flanders himself.

FLANDERS "20" IS YOUR CAR—it is the ideal car for the man who does not feel he can afford, or who does not care to put more than $1,000 into an automobile—whether it be the one car he and his family shall use for all purposes, or an auxiliary car for the rich man who wishes to save his big, expensive, more cumbersome touring car or limousine.

DELIVERIES—YES, THAT'S THE ONLY TROUBLE—we can't seem to catch up with the demand—can't promise you immediate delivery. August was the biggest month in our history. September will surpass it by 800 cars—shipping 125 Flanders "20" cars per day now and increasing our factory facilities just as fast as we can. Bought the original Ford plant last month and putting on 1,000 more men. This will increase our output 20 per cent. Trying our best to catch up—but people have come to appreciate this car and the demand still leads the supply

ONLY WAY IS TO SEE YOUR LOCAL DEALER at once. Get your order in, pay a deposit, so the order will be sent to the factory and given its regular serial number—then you won't have to wait long. Every day's delay in placing the order makes two more days' delay in getting the car, for Flanders "20" is carrying everything before her, and the "tin cars" are losing ground fast. Flanders "20" has the call—but if you hurry you'll be "lucky."

A Book That Clearly Explains Why We Can Build a Big 30 H. P. Touring Car for $900

MOST people who want a car of the 30 horsepower five-passenger type go out in the open market with the fixed idea that it will cost them somewhere around $1250. In their mind a car at less than that must be a little, insignificant, low-powered machine. They picture everything that has heretofore been offered around the one thousand dollar mark, and they see exactly what the country has been flooded with—a nice lot of little toy cars.

But here is a new step. Here you find a big fine touring car and it costs only $900, a car with ample room for five passengers. It has a powerful 30 horsepower motor giving you more speed and power than you will ever care to use, for it can be driven between 40 and 50 miles an hour. It has the selective transmission fitted with F. & S. annular bearings—the finest made. A staunch pressed steel frame. A big wheel base—center control—and the fashionable fore doors. Good leather upholstering stuffed with fine hair. Handsome and striking body design with graceful lines. And the body work is beautiful. Twenty-two painting operations are made on each individual body. This car could be made more elaborately but it could not be made better or finer.

It still seems difficult for some people to understand why we can manufacture and sell cars for less money than any other manufacturer in the business. Yet if your business is shirts, and your plant produces 1000 dozen a day of a certain grade, you know that your production costs are less than the factory turning out but 100 dozen a day. Or, if you manufacture bath tubs, or deal in apples, or cigars, you know that either of these handled in enormous quantities cost less per a certain unit than if handled in much smaller lots. This condition does not vary a particle in the production of automobiles.

So we have published a very thorough and interesting book that shows you the difference in automobile plants. And it clearly proves the ability of the plant producing 20,000 cars to make and sell its product at prices from 20 to 40% lower than any similar line of cars on the market.

This book takes you through the entire Willys-Overland plant—80 acres of it. You can sit in your own living room and go through the greatest automobile plant in the world. It gives you a clear idea of the economical manufacturing strength of the Overland organization. It shows you why the factory making 20,000 cars can make them better and at less cost than the factory making but 5000 cars. It shows you where you can get the most for your money. It shows you how we receive the raw materials and gradually convert them into the finished car. It shows you every step—every move. It takes you through the four months' process of making each single car. And it shows you exactly where and how we can manufacture more economically than a smaller plant and how you get the benefit of this. It shows you exactly how our cars are made—how our great automatic mechanical equipment does the work more rapidly and at less cost than the hand labor found in smaller plants. It shows you shops and departments not found in other plants, such as our great drop forge plant and aluminum casting shop. It is written in a readable style, not technical or dry, but clear, concise and interesting. It is the most thorough book of its kind ever published. To read it is an education. It is free and we want everyone to have a copy.

This, better than anything (outside of a trip to the factory itself) will give you a good idea of the real worth of this $900 car. Take a stroll down automobile row in your city. Look over all the popular priced cars. See if you can find the equal of this $900 car for less than $1250. The book referred to above can be had from our dealer (address below) or direct from the factory. Write or phone him, or us, and you will get one by return mail. This also shows you our complete 1912 line, with prices, specifications and complete descriptions as well as handsomely colored plates of each model. Better get a copy at once.

Girls Toiling in Blake & Knowles Works, Part of the Pump Trust, Compelled to Lift Weights Heavy Enough for Strong Men and in Same Room With Men; Also Unable to Wear Sufficient Clothing

Sunday American Reporter With Difficulty Enters Plant and Tells of Conditions Condemned by Men Workers—Labor Leaders Declare 56-Hour Law Violated and New Legislation Will Be Asked

Here's a story that makes a man shudder! It is the report of a Sunday AMERICAN reporter who went to the Blake & Knowles Steam Pump Works in Third street, East Cambridge, and saw young women at work in a foundry. They shovelled sand, lifted weights and did the same work as a man. Sometimes the heat is 110. Sometimes they are almost naked, with men in the same condition near them.

Startling as is the fact that women in America are permitted to do such work, the shame grows greater when it becomes known that they get less than half the pay that men get for the same employment. Read this reporter's story and then try to realize whether you are within Russia or within the shadow of Harvard College!

Would you think it possible in this intelligent and progressive State of Massachusetts to see young women earning their livelihood by [illegible]

Would you think it possible to find a female in a temperature of [illegible] degrees in the hottest days of Summer?

Would you like to see young women toiling heavy pieces [illegible]

Would you like to see them in their dresses, begrimmed with dirt and soot?

When I first looked at the brick foundry I could not believe that young women worked in such a place. I peeped through the windows. I saw enough to convince me that conditions that had already been represented to me were not overdrawn.

Work in Terrific Heat.

My first impulse was to withdraw, but I stood and watched from the [illegible] became curious. When no one was looking, I went into the men's foundry. The sense that I was not wanted there was evident. Nevertheless, I had a chat with the men and made some inquiries. Their first work. You are obliged to go through the men's section, where they do their molding before you go into the women's section, which is merely separated from the men by a thin [illegible]

The discussion [illegible] at last week's labor convention at Haverhill by John F. Sheehan, who belongs to the Iron Moulders' Union of Holyoke. Mr. Sheehan, one of the ablest labor men in the State, has been the head of the State branch of the American Federation of Labor, and has served a [illegible] in the Legislature.

Mr. Sheehan, with vivid language pictured to the 200 men and [illegible] at this convention, the conditions of the women who work in the Blake & Knowles Steam Pump Works of East Cambridge, the audience could [illegible] In words

He said that the women often worked when the temperature was 110, that they were [illegible] by the ruling bent to wear only a small garment; that they were [illegible] sections of iron that an ordinary man could hardly [illegible] and that they were paid only about $1.25 a day for work which men receive [illegible]

A reporter of the Sunday AMERICAN went to the iron foundry last week, and found conditions, as far as he could tell by one visit, as Mr. Sheehan had described them. There were a score or more women in the place, mostly girls from Poland who could speak little English.

The women work practically side by side with the men. The work the women do in the dirt and grime and awful heat is the hardest that any one could imagine. One of the features of their work is lifting a slab of iron [illegible] which the moulding core box is covered.

LIFT WEIGHTS TOO HEAVY FOR MEN.

The reporter saw two women hoist this [illegible] box. The reporter by [illegible] on to the box and later turned the heavy sand filled box over. The reporter saw another woman [illegible] at the iron [illegible] It was estimated that the [illegible] 200 pounds.

The [illegible] to the men and [illegible] in the place. The men [illegible] of was a shame that the women were compelled to do such work in the heat of summer, they said, but the men and women went almost naked in plain sight of one another.

The women work by the piece, and [illegible] by working hard and long hours [illegible] to earn as much as $1.25 a day. When one of the women was asked why she did this kind of work she replied:

"I speak not much English. I must have food to live."

"How long do you work?"

"Over hours. Sometimes 9, sometimes 9 at night. We want to make as much as we can."

Mr. Sheehan of the Iron Moulder's Union at Holyoke, said yesterday that the working of the women by piece-work was a scheme of the Pump Trust to evade the State law regulating the hours that women may work in a factory.

A law was passed by the last Legislature, known as the "fifty-four hour law" for women, which does not go into effect until the first of next year. The present law governing the employment of women is found in Chapter 645 of the State Laws, and says that no woman shall work more than fifty-six hours in any week nor longer than ten hours in any one day, unless it is arranged to work longer one day to make another shorter, but in no case shall the woman work longer than fifty-six hours in a week.

George F. Aborn, general manager of the Blake & Knowles Pump Works, when interviewed yesterday about conditions in the foundry, defended the employment of women for that work, and asserted that the law was not violated.

Women Employed 10 Years.

Why, women have been employed in this iron foundry for ten years," said Mr. Aborn. "They are also employed for the same work in associate companies. They are husky women and they can do it. They do not wear immodest clothing."

The two Sunday AMERICAN reporters who visited the pump foundry yesterday wanted to watch the women at work. This was impossible from the outside, as the windows are stained white so that no one may look in, while the glass in the windows where the men work exclusively is transparent.

Manager Aborn, when told that the Sunday AMERICAN would print this story to-day, was inclined to allow the reporters to go in and see the women at work, but on second thought [illegible] reprehensible reform in the work, but after he had had a consultation with some one behind a closed door, he refused.

The Blake & Knowles Pump Company is a subsidiary of the International Steam Pump Company, of which Benjamin Guggenheim, one of the seven [illegible] Company and the Deane Steam Pump Company in Holyoke, also owned by the Pump Trust, are [illegible] foundries, it was learned yesterday by Mr. Sheehan, that employ women in the state. The Holyoke men went out on a strike because of the employment of women and the matter is still in abeyance.

Benjamin Guggenheim, one of the seven [illegible] who dominate the Smelting Trust, and who are worth, it is estimated, approximately [illegible] is a member of the Union Club [illegible] and other New York clubs. He married a daughter of a rich New York banker.

A reporter went to the foundry last night. Not a light in the room where the women are employed was [illegible] At that time [illegible] too dark for [illegible] ing in the [illegible] and [illegible] era [illegible]

But the [illegible] for dry sand [illegible] women [illegible] of the poor light they kept almost [illegible] caution among them. They walked slowly in groups of twos and [illegible]

The women were the only ones in the foundry after 5 o'clock with the exception of an occasional moulder and the watchmen of the building. Those men, it was explained, are paid for overtime work. The shippers, machinists, carpenters and blacksmiths quit work at noon. The moulders worked until 6. But the women, it was said, never stopped until after 6, and frequently, they were employed until 8 or 9

"Must Have Food to Live."

While the reporter was there they stopped for luncheon. One woman sat down beside the reporter to eat her luncheon of two slices of black bread and a pickle.

The woman did not take more than ten minutes for her luncheon, hurrying back so that she could earn a little more money. When one of the women was asked why she did this kind of work she replied:

STATE LAW BEARING UPON EMPLOYMENT OF WOMEN

No woman shall be employed in laboring in a manufacturing or mechanical establishment more than ten hours a day in any one day, and in no case shall the hours of labor exceed fifty-six in a week.

Every employer shall post in a conspicuous place in every room in which such persons are employed a printed notice stating the number of hours' work required of them on each day of the week, the hours of commencing and stopping work, and the hours when the time allowed for meals begins and ends.

The employment of such person at any time other than as stated in said printed notice shall be deemed a violation of the provisions of this section.—From Chapter 645, Laws of 1908.

John F. Sheehan of Holyoke who startled the labor convention at Haverhill last week with an exposé of the fact that women are employed as moulders in the Blake & Knowles steam pump works in East Cambridge as one of the most noted labor men in the state.

He has appeared in conventions of Massachusetts on the platform and is regarded as one of the most finished speakers in New England. His ability as an orator is the first characteristic that ought him prominently before the people.

Mr. Sheehan has served in the House of Representatives for six years. While there he has always been well to the front in every measures that he found to be for the good of organized labor.

Ran for Holyoke Mayor.

As a Democrat he was a candidate for Mayor of Holyoke and was beaten by a very small vote. He has held nearly all the offices of the Moulders' Union and was an organizer for years in the international order.

Mr. Sheehan has what he calls as two hobbies—temperance and the institutions that care for the sick and the afflicted. In 1895 Mr. Sheehan was one of the original advocates of the establishment of the sanitorium for the treatment of tubercular cases at Rutland. He also advocated the establishment of a hospital and home for those afflicted with the same malady in the eastern part of the State.

MANAGER REFUSES TO ADMIT REPORTERS

Two Sunday AMERICAN reporters who visited the Blake & Knowles foundry yesterday were refused admittance by Superintendent George F. Ahern, for permission in regard to the women employed in the core department.

"Mr. Ahern, the Sunday AMERICAN understands that the women employed in the core department work under improper conditions. We have been given permission to visit the department so that we may observe the exact conditions and report the same to the AMERICAN readers," said one of the newspapermen to the general manager.

"I'm sorry, but I'm very busy this morning," replied Mr. Ahern, "and cannot spare the time to accompany you through the department. However, if you will come around next week I will see what I can do for you."

"But," he was told, "the Sunday AMERICAN will have a story to-morrow to the effect that the women employed to do work unfit for women, or they are compelled to move heavy machinery, they have to wear little clothing, or under unsanitary conditions, or are compelled to work many hours a week than the law permits."

"Oh, we've been hearing complaints along," replied Mr. Ahern. "What do we care what statements persons make when they are not founded on facts."

"But, suppose they are founded on facts?"

"In that case I will see them myself and afterward make a statement if I consider one warranted.

"Do you consider the work proper for women?"

"I do."

"Don't you think it is a little too much?"

"Well, no. They are many women employed who can do it all right. Most of them are foreigners. They don't complain."

"How many hours a week do they work?"

"Fifty-four. That's the law permits."

"But it is said that they are compelled to work a good deal more than 54 hours a week. Is that true?"

"No. If it were true the State police would be after us. They do work nine hours a day. That makes fifty-four. They start to work at 7 a. m. and stop for lunch at noon. They go to work again at 12:45 and quit at 4:45 o'clock."

"What clothing do the women wear at work?"

"Why they wear whatever clothing they have there is no rule in the matter. We furnish aprons to those who have not any of their own. Are there any other questions you want to ask? If not I have other matters to attend to and will be glad to see you next week."

PEER'S ALLOWANCE CUT TO HALF MILLION

Duke of Westminster Forced by Trustees to Stagger Along with This Pitiful Sum.

PRINCESS 'PAT' NOT COMING

Will Not Accompany Father to Canada and So Abandons a Visit to New York.

By CHESTER OVERTON.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—The Duke of Westminster has been "doing the pace" to such an extent lately, owing, it is said, to his infatuation for a Gaiety Theatre actress, that his trustees have put him on an allowance. The sum is unknown, but is believed to be half a million a year, sufficient to purchase a few pearls or motors for the object of his devotion. Despite his enormous wealth the Duke has overdrawn his bank account four hundred thousand.

Under the will of the late Duke, who understood his son, the trustees have definite powers which they are now forced to exercise. The present infatuation is unnamed, but the Duke is much seen with Gertie Millar, who is said to possess a collection of gems unrivalled by the wealthiest peeresses. Both King Edward and King George have administered lectures to the Duke on his mode of life, but with no effect.

The Duchess's position is trying, and had it not been for the intervention of his ambitious mother, Mrs. Cornwallis West, and pressure from high quarters, she would long since have sued for a divorce. She frequently goes days without knowing the whereabouts of the Duke, who is most erratic.

The Duke is a model landlord and also most generous, but he is not popular in Cheshire, the seat of his ancestral estates, for the reason that, unlike the late Duke, he takes no real interest in sports. He races horses and hunters do not amuse him, and his enthusiasm over aviation and motor-boat racing proved to be short lived.

Will Not See Princess Patricia.

American women who have been combining on the possibilities of seeing Princess Patricia of Connaught at New York this Winter, when the Duke, her father, takes up his duties of Governor General of Canada are doomed to disappointment. The Princess has decided not to go with her father, preferring instead to visit her sister, the Crown Princess of Sweden, and enjoy the Winter sports of Stockholm.

King George, it is said, is getting worried over the disinclination of Princess "Pat" and her brother, Prince Arthur of Connaught, to marry. For point of reason the King would like Prince Arthur to marry the Grand Duchess Olga, the seventeen-year-old daughter of the Czar. Prince Arthur, who is a soldierly and handsome young man, slightly lame, has other plans, with his sister Patricia as an ally. It is said that Princess Patricia's heart is not free, as she was once much attracted by her father's equerry, and Arthur now pays marked attention to the daughter of a British diplomat to whom affairs were said to have reached the bud. There was no opposition to a regent being appointed in the absence of King George to India, and Prince Arthur was selected for the position, in which capacity, inasmuch as his father is now in Canada. This is not the first time in British history the King and Queen of England will be out of the country for many weeks, with no one representing the throne.

The King and Queen open Balmoral on the first of October, and will divide their time between Buckingham Palace and Windsor Castle. The Queen was rather worn out by the season's strenuous duties, but is getting her health. She has spent a great deal of time with the children of her youngest son, Prince John, who was in the hands of measles at Frogmore.

The chief event in the theatrical world for the coming week will be the first appearance of Marie Tempest as a manager-actress. She takes the Royalty theatre and will produce a comedy by Arnold Bennett, the novelist, entitled "Polite Farce," which has not been much in evidence since she left her husband, Cosmo Gordon Lennox.

Kitty Gordon a Little Previous.

An announcement that is causing some amusement in theatrical world is made by Kitty Gordon of her engagement to Count Morris Fries. The natural question is, what is to become of her husband, the Hon. H. Berenger? Rumors of a divorce is imminent, but the announcement is considerably in advance of the usual previous. Kitty was shot at recently by a man outside the Playing Theatre and the wounds are healing.

Lord Beresford, who has been retiring his fallen women to South Africa, is again busy, and will be joined shortly by Mrs. Keppel. Terence McSwiney, the well-known actor, is in America, where he would appear to vaudeville.

With the coming of Autumn society is returning to town, and the restaurants and theatres have been doing a splendid business. The most conspicuous are Mr. and Mrs. George J. Gould, Mrs. Ronalds, Mrs. Reginald Fellowes, who is better remembered as Mrs. Cornwallis West, and Mrs. Keppel, the step-daughter of Lord Lonsdale.

Mrs. Hwfa Williams, a daughter of Mr. W. H. Vanderbilt, and the Countess of Craven are in Paris. Mrs. Hwfa Williams is a great friend of Queen Alexandra.

Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Fellowes are in Scotland, where they are visiting Lord Lovat, one of the old families of Scotland. Lord Lovat is a widower, but has a married daughter, who is living her step-daughter at Eastwell Park.

Mr. and Mrs. Hwfa Williams, Lord and Lady Lonsdale, Lord Lovat and Lord Ribblesdale are among those who have been entertaining at Eastwell Park, the seat of Lord Winchilsea, who is now in Canada.

The Legges, one of the old families of Hanover, have been entertaining at Eastwell Park, the seat of Lord Winchilsea, who is now in Canada.

Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Fellowes will make an extended tour of India and Egypt. She has been appointed lady of the bedchamber to Queen Alexandra during the durbar. Her daughter, Mrs. George Montagu, is living with her in her new home in Portman square.

LADY LEITH ON YACHT.

St. Louis Peeress Is Cruising Among Scottish Isles.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—Lady Leith of Fyvie, former Miss Mary Theresa Emery of St. Louis, has foregone the usual retirement to her Scottish castles for the hunting season, and with her husband has inaugurated a new way to pass the time. Lady Leith the end of the season and the opening of the Winter round of galeties. She has gathered together a formidable company of guests and yesterday and is cruising among the Scottish isles.

When the guests have tired of their aquatic entertainment Lady Leith will bring the belle of the 1911 season in Aberdeen and welcome them in a series of late August house entertainments that will last until the elite begin to flock to London for the season.

Paris Enjoys Lively Garden-Cavalieri Row

Special Cable to Sunday American.

PARIS, Sept. 23.—A row between Lina Cavalieri and Mary Garden is raging like a prairie fire fanned by a Western whirlwind. The cause of this latest outburst was an anti-Garden reception held by Cavalieri at her home in the Rue Mesnil on the night Miss Garden was singing Thais at the Grand Opera. Le Gaulois, a Garden prime donna in entertaining her guests showed them her pictures. In a most prominent place in the room was being a painting of a giraffe. Fierce electric lights beat upon its long neck, and some mischievous anti-Gardeniste uttered the phrase, "The American Thais."

The uproarious fun which followed this could not be checked for a long time.

Then Cavalieri, clothed in white and wearing her thirty thousand dollar rope of pearls, and with emeralds as big as hazel nuts, in her ears, stood near her piano in cream and gold and sang snatches from Thais.

We have now Cavalieries and Gardenites; followers of Thais Garden and partisans of Thais Cavalieri, both being hyphenated Georges M. Cavalieri husband and "an American" husband and Miss Garden was born in Aberdeen, brought up in Chicago, the rabbi loved keenly by the American colony, is round consequently take sides with either.

POET YEATS PICTURES IRELAND OF TO-DAY

Noted Author Now in Boston Declares Irish Drama Has Done Wonders in Molding National Spirit

William Butler Yeats, writer of the article printed below, is an Irish poet, lecturer and dramatist who was born in Dublin in 1865. His father, J. B. Yeats, was a well-known artist. When his preparatory education was over young Yeats took up art as his life occupation, but in his twenty-first year his inclinations turned away from art and towards literature; and in that field he has worked since with progressive ideals as his guide stars.

His first effort, "The Wanderings of Oisin" was published in 1880. Two years later he wrote "John Sherman." In 1892 he produced "The Countess Kathleen," following it at short intervals by "The Twilight." Other later works are "The Poems of William Lovet," "A Book of Irish Verse," "The Wind Among the Reeds," "The Secret Rose," "Where There Is Nothing," "In the Shadow of the Waters," "Ideas of Good and Evil" and others of like scope.

His "Kathleen ni Houlihan" is a drama which has attracted much attention on the other side of the Atlantic. Its production is awaited here with interest.

Mr. Yeats is a product of the great national awakening which has been brought about in Ireland within the past twenty years, an awakening political, literary and industrial, the source of which is to be found in the Parnell movement that so triumphantly led to-day by John E. Redmond.

William Butler Yeats with his National theatre company, the Irish players; Douglas Hyde, with his Gaelic League in close connection, and Horace Plunkett, with his Irish co-operative movement, are all powerful wings, by-movements, auxiliaries, of the great movement for Home Rule, which is to-day, under Redmond's leadership, creeping steadily toward victory.

In the article below Mr. Yeats points out the work of education and the others are doing. He tells how the Irish mind to bring Home Rule," they are preparing Ireland for it by the creation of a nationalized citizenship and the raising of the standard to the highest ideals of the race.

In the most laudable of aims Mr. Yeats and his colleagues will find they have many sympathizers in Boston. The Boston American bids him a hearty welcome to Boston and a pleasant stay. Mr. Yeats's article follows.

By WILLIAM BUTLER YEATS
Written Exclusively for the Sunday AMERICAN

WITH the practical [illegible] Ireland has changed her face. Nationalism [illegible] mainly upon grievances, has a [illegible] but from instinct [illegible] over Ireland have sprung [illegible] with them a revival of old Irish songs and dances, but since [illegible] with this movement there [illegible] of this sort, of social reconstruction [illegible] land is connected directly [illegible] admit common interests. [illegible]

Party spirit and [illegible] when they are united [illegible] necessary for art and [illegible] land to-day that the [illegible] the necessary sacrifices [illegible] result is that instead [illegible] Young Ireland movement [illegible] cipline of an army [illegible] tion of life or a new [illegible]

For Home Rule has [illegible] banking system and its creameries over the greater part of Ireland. Five or six years ago a municipal gallery containing the finest collection of modern French painting [illegible] the Luxemburg was founded by the enthusiasm of one man belonging to an old Unionist and Protestant family and by a co-operation of all parties.

"IN THE THEATRE THE MOB BECOMES A PEOPLE."

Victor Hugo says somewhere or other that it is in the theatre the mob becomes a people, and it is in the Abbey Theatre, whose players are opening their first American tour in Boston this week, that one has seen most clearly this welding of classes.

Lady Gregory and myself—its directors—have insisted that the dramatist, if he but expresses himself not as a pamphleteer, but as the examples of the great masters bids him, must choose subject and treatment as he pleases. Unionist and Nationalist alike have carried into popularity plays of Lady Gregory's like "The Rising of the Moon" and "The Gaol Gate" and my own "Kathleen ni Houlihan" in which the national spirit expresses itself, but for the difference of form as it did in the songs of young Ireland. Nationalists and Unionists alike have welcomed plays like Mr. Robinson's "Harvest," Mr. Norreys Connell's Pipe," Mr. Erskine's "Mixed Marriage," in which some attacked nation a characteristic is in a spirit more uncompromising than it ever was in Unionist tracts and to the fantastic, violent and beautiful satire of J. M. Synge, which chooses for its subject in seeming the western peasant in reality, those who sit in stalls and pit.

Not that this has come without trouble and tumult, even. We have been under police protection, we have had riots. We have disregarded promises and threats alike. After one of the first performances of Kathleen ni Houlihan," I remember being hissed outside the theatre by a group of young men of the Unionist class, but we have never withdrawn plays that we thought good because of threat or promise or even indifference.

A theatre is a temple dedicated to the curiosity of life, and by feeding that curiosity we have taught men to sit side by side who never met before.

But this does not mean any weakening of national spirit. These men are not less but more interested in Ireland than they were. For the first time they see on the stage the men and women that they meet at their own doors or the emotions of their own hearts.

"BE ENTIRELY NATURAL," ACTORS ARE TOLD.

The ordinary touring company that comes to Dublin—like touring companies the world over—celebrates in their plays one form of life almost [illegible] the same all over the world—the international life of the drawing room. Their authors may seem to go everywhere for their subjects, but they have found but one thing everywhere.

Our authors may never go beyond the shores of Ireland, but they are interested in almost everything that is within them. A writer like Synge is no realist, he creates his world as Cervantes created his—from types that he has observed, but like Cervantes he casts them like vast fantastic shadows upon the luminous clouds of his imagination. But there are others who copy more literally the life they know and any month on the Abbey stage can be seen "the strong farmer" of the South and his problems, the Northern artizan, the life of the workhouse parlor and the humors of some little country town.

We do not [illegible] say to our players as the producers of international drama must say "Forget your local accent, forget the men and women you grew up among so that little town that bred you. The novelist (Mr. Thomas Hardy of Dorchester, let us say) can make his works of art out of the observations of his childhood but these will be of no service to you for you are concerned with nothing but how Lord What-You-Will and Mr. and Mrs. Nobody, a type of person you have never known, get out of that matrimonial tangle of theirs."

On the contrary, we say to the young man who comes to us with his local accent and his local knowledge, "Be entirely natural, express nothing but what you have seen or felt and always remember that what you have seen or felt before you were twenty is more deeply rooted in the instincts, it more [illegible] the imagination than anything else you will ever know or see."

What is [illegible] with Sir Horace Plunkett's economists, Ireland has begun to use her own life, to absorb herself in herself and therefore is once more creative.

PREPARING IRELAND FOR HOME RULE.

Sir Horace Plunkett is not working like Mr. John Redmond to bring Home Rule, but he is preparing an Ireland that will know how to live under Home Rule. We, too, are creating a few citizens for self-governing Ireland.

While the land question divided Ireland, in so far as a man learned illiterate interests, in so far as he came to love literature or painting or [illegible] music, he turned his thoughts away from Ireland. I think I can say we have done a great deal to bring his thoughts back again.

The young man of to-day did not need to have his national spirit strengthened but he did need to have his intellectual ambition aroused and he can only about life deepened, and I think we have done that for him.

But it was national spirit precisely that young men of the leisured classes were lacking, and we are giving them national spirit, teaching them that Ireland should preoccupy much of their thought and of their imagination if they are to live in Ireland.

Some of our countrymen did not like Synge's great satiric comedy, "The Playboy of the Western World." They thought it slandered the life of the people, but the day after we performed it at Oxford before an enthusiastic audience of undergraduates, the Oxford Union (the historic debating house of the undergraduates) passed I believe for the first time, and certainly by a great majority, a resolution in favor of Home Rule.

Mr. John Redmond was the principal speaker, but I think he would say we had done our part also to pass that resolution.

No representation of an Irish countryman seen through an idealizing haze, no charming but conventional colleen of the stage, can give Ireland the credit in the world's eye that she gets from giving birth to a profound imaginative intellect.

Dante's Divine was the crimes of Italy and yet it was the study of Dante, somebody has said, that created Italian unity. If Shakespeare and Cervantes had been permitted to write as what Spanish and English patriots thought a favorable representation of their country, we should have lacked not only Sancho Panza and Falstaff but the wild knight himself who surely was no fair picture of the hidalgos of Spain.

"LET US SPREAD CURIOSITY ABOUT LIFE."

Let us spread everywhere curiosity about life. The tolerance bred of this curiosity is essential to wholesome public life. Literature and the drama—and the drama is the most powerful form of literature—can alone show us that men and women are the most important things, that they may seem do what seems the worst actions, and yet not be despicable men.

Where literature has not awakened imaginative sympathy and that impartial curiosity, men are harsh and violent, hating their opponents, not merely in public affairs but in daily life; and there is everywhere suspicion and division.

Old John O'Leary, the Fenian leader, the friend of Kickham and of Stevens, once said to me:

"There never was a cause so bad that it has not been served by good men for it has seemed to them good reasons."

And that consideration, that in the heart of his day, comes to life on the benches of an honest theatre more quickly than any place else in the world.

Four or five years ago many of those who sympathized with us thought the powers against us too powerful, but to-day we fill our little theatre, and especially upon Saturday nights turn away great numbers from the cheaper parts of the house.

We were often told at the start, too, that we would find the priests opposed to us, but certainly that has not been the case. I have seen priests in the stalls, and we have given performances in the Irish provinces where priests to-nil the audience.

Nobody, I daresay, likes all our plays, and I think it a great gain that men have learned, as I know some have, to come for what they like, though there is much else that they dislike; that they hate, even, and with our fierce Irish hatred.

From the very start, it was part of our plan to bring these plays to America, and sometimes we have kept our spirit up in periods of discouragement by saying: "We must keep the company together. We have to go to our people in America."

Seven years ago I was lecturing in California, and I went to the lecture hall through semi-tropical vegetation, and yet when I came there I found a crowd of Irish lads, moved by the same thoughts, the same scraps of verse from the same poets, that young Catholic boys are moved by in Dublin; and as I lectured I said to myself: "Our people are the same all over the world."

It is a single imagination: What pleases in one place will, though not perhaps at once, for we all come but slowly to our real tastes, please it everywhere in the end.

WHITE ASKS PEOPLE TO COMPARE RECORDS IN NAMING NOMINEE

By NORMAN H. WHITE.

THE people throughout the State know of my efforts to accomplish legislation for their benefit. My record has been distributed in every city and town in the Commonwealth, and it is one that will stand the test of scrutiny. It is a record that appeals to the people, and it is the belief of that the people will ratify to the support of a candidate whose record and character can be put in evidence. It is because of this fact that I believe I am the strongest candidate the Republican party can nominate to defeat Governor Foss.

Last year it is essential that the people of Massachusetts elect a Republican governor. It is therefore essential that the Republican party put in nomination a candidate whose record of work done for the people of the State [illegible] can be [illegible] to the people for election.

[illegible] I have consistently and [illegible] for the welfare of the people. I have made no promises and I have absolutely refused to [illegible] the office of governor [illegible] the people.

I appeal from the [illegible] to the people [illegible] to the [illegible] of the party.

WALKER APPEALS TO THE PEOPLE AGAINST MACHINE'S MANDATE

By JOSEPH WALKER.

I FEEL sure that I shall receive the Republican nomination for Governor, because I believe that the rank and file of the party in this State approve of the principles for which I stand and the methods I have followed in this campaign.

As I said in my announcement last Feb. I have not attempted to buy a nomination by newspaper or other [illegible] of any political worker. I have depended for organization and political work upon the workers of my friends, and of those who believe in my methods and the principles for which I stand.

I am opposed to the State machine because I stand for direct nomination, because I believe in the direct election of United States Senators, because I have backed up President Taft in the [illegible] tariff program. I [illegible] support of the progressive policies [illegible] in politics.

Massachusetts progressed [illegible] years under Republican [illegible] I believe that the people of the State demands the [illegible] an party to power [illegible] when a victory in [illegible] had lost confidence in the Republican leadership.

My nomination will mean [illegible] ship, and one which will [illegible] to the ideals of the party.

I have made no promises [illegible] and absolutely free [illegible] the office of governor [illegible] the people.

Dwyer to Speak on Ireland.

Next Tuesday evening [illegible] C. M. C. T. [illegible] will hold [illegible] Rose Hall. Daniel [illegible] will give [illegible] his [illegible] on "The [illegible] Ireland." Msgr. [illegible] de Wolf and James J. Dwyer [illegible] vocal selections.

FROTHINGHAM BANKS ON RECORD AND HAVING ONCE DEFEATED FOSS

By LOUIS A. FROTHINGHAM

YOU have asked me why and how I expect to receive the Republican nomination for Governor at the coming caucuses on Tuesday, September 26. The reasons why I expect to win the nomination in the case of my record in the public service. I have served five years in the Massachusetts Legislature and for two years I was Speaker of the House.

My record during those five years was a sufficiently good one, so that I was asked to give up that office by Republicans and Democrats alike. [illegible] City of Boston, [illegible] call [illegible] for the nomine of the [illegible] I stood the test of popular approval. I am sure there will [illegible]

I believe the people of [illegible] have been pleased [illegible] I have tried to [illegible] I have endeavored [illegible] I have always tried [illegible] I have endeavored [illegible] I have always tried [illegible] I have endeavored [illegible] I have always tried

"COMMERCIAL HONESTY(?)."

By HERBERT KAUFMAN.

Copyright 1911 by Herbert Kaufman.

Commercial Honesty is much like German silver: the one is neither German nor silver, the other neither commercial nor honest.

Integrity is too sure of itself to hem and haw and use euphemism. When virtue starts to draw fine points it ceases to be virtue.

Phrases can't alter phases. Sophistries may befog but obscure, but they can't upset the truth.

Trade is not a privileged profession. Business men are entitled to no more moral latitude than any other classification of society.

The earth over a contract is a contract, a pledged word is a pledged word, and an agreement is an agreement, twenty-four hours of a day and three hundred and sixty-five days in the year.

There is no such thing as approximate rectitude. A man either delivers according to specifications or falls short.

No argument in support of double dealing will stand. Dishonesty under any circumstances is culpable.

No concern is in a sound state so long as its system is diseased with unhealthy practices.

Elephantiasis is a malady common alike to corporations and humans: an abnormal enlargement which produces grotesque at the expense of their vitality and sanity. Growth from within outward is dangerous.

It's no more an indication of astuteness to take an undue profit from a confiding purchaser than it's a sign of financial genius to give a blind man short change.

The world's business must mainly be conducted on faith. Almost every transaction in every market proceeds on the belief of the buyer in the character of the seller.

Wherever a great institution has endured for any length of time the highest principles have characterized its creation.

A sneakthief never grew to be a captain of success—the course of crookedness is measured.

Permanency must rest upon stanch foundations—you can't build high or lastingly upon a rotten beginning.

Here and there a few men of remarkable attainments have dragged themselves toward the top despite the handicap of instability, but without the hindrance of their record, in every instance they could and would have fared farther and faster.

Every game has its rules. The cheat reflects himself in his opponent.

Fouls, rents and misplays must at some stage come to light. The count is inevitable and with it the accounting.

Description and Quality of the Land

For real country life within the City of Boston limits, our properties cannot be equalled. The land is very high, dry, clean, level garden land overlooking miles and miles of pleasant country, the Blue Hills and the Charles River. A pretty, artificial pond has been made in the central part of the property, which contains excellent bait for fishing. Lots bordering on this pond can be bought as low as $68 each. Our lots are of a large variety, large and small, wide and narrow, long and short, so that every one will find a lot to suit his personal requirements.

Lots can be secured large enough for a good sized hen house, with plenty of good soil for a nice vegetable garden, flower beds, lawn and fruit trees.

The entire property has the appearance of a very extensive natural park, as it contains thousands of shade trees of a large variety, almost every lot contains a number of these, which makes it even more desirable and valuable. The trees alone on many of these lots are worth the price asked for the ground. Every lot has a frontage on our new, graded streets now finished.

Samples of Special Winter Rate Bargains of Swell Corner Lots. "First Come, First Served." No Lots Reserved Without a Deposit of $10.

As wholesale dealers, selling direct to the consumer, we are in a position to save you the middleman's profit, which you can put into your home.

Excellent Location for Moderate Priced Homes

A [illegible] will be in a position to [illegible] a few [illegible] a short distance of a home of one, two [illegible] rooms, [illegible] $10, $20, $30, and add to these as their income [illegible]. The property is only a few minutes' walk from the 600-acre Stony Brook Reservation, which is a [illegible] park.

Outdoor Life and Recreation

During the summer months this district is alive with people, who spend the day enjoying the many attractions and recreations afforded by the Charles River and Stony Brook Reservation, which is situated close by. We believe that for recreation this neighborhood is the most popular place of its kind in the City of Boston. Electric cars run frequently, with only a five-cent fare to any part of the city. Cars pass the land.

Location and Transportation the Very Best

Our properties are located along the line of natural growth of the City where real estate values are rapidly increasing in value. Many homes have already been built on our lots and are now occupied by our customers who are saving their rent for themselves. The neighborhood is well built up with attractive homes which are a pride to the City.

Three lines of cars pass the properties, which have a frontage on the beautiful Washington Street Boulevard, finished 100 feet wide, giving excellent transportation to the City; the running time being only 28 minutes to the shopping district. It is only a short distance to the railroad station, schools, stores and churches, affording all the conveniences of the City people. When you consider that all these advantages can be had within a 5c fare to the City on land at such low prices, you make no mistake, and your land should increase very rapidly in value from year to year.

PIANO SALE

DON'T PAY TRUST PRICES

FOR ANY MAKE PIANO

I have been telling the people for years that it is not necessary to pay luxury prices to the Piano Trust for pianos. A piano is no longer a luxury. I have taken it out of that class. I have made it as easy to secure a piano (by reducing the price and making the terms of purchase liberal) as it is to secure any other household necessity.

I have educated the public on piano values to such an extent that the intelligent man or woman, who knows how to go about it, can now buy a piano for much less than it could be bought for three years ago. I am in receipt of letters daily from all over New England, praising me for my stand against the Piano Trust, and I am selling more pianos at lower prices than ever before. It pays to protect the public.

Don't buy any make piano till you see me.

By CLEMENT L. POLLOCK.

A reporter who has been in continuous service in the Editorial Department of the BOSTON AMERICAN since the first day of publication, and in Mr. Hearst's employ sixteen years.

SOMETIMES a managing editor is just as human as anybody else. He likes to come down to the earth and talk about things that other people think and talk about, and look upon human beings as men and women with feelings something akin to his own.

Mine was in that mood when he said to me yesterday:

"If you were going to write about something that is really interesting to a lot of people in New England and something that you knew something about, what would it be?"

A man who works for a Hearst newspaper is supposed to be able to answer a question like that almost instantly, if not before. So I replied with a good deal of confidence:

"The most interesting New England institution is the Boston AMERICAN, and it is probably the most talked about."

"Write about it," said the managing editor, "and say just what you know and think."

I'm going to do it. And the more I think about it the more I'm convinced that I told the managing editor the REAL TRUTH.

This newspaper was started only a little more than seven years ago. Everybody in this neck of the country knows that New England is not given to running after new things—quite the contrary.

Yet in that time the Sunday AMERICAN has reached a circulation of 400,000 regularly and the daily paper nearly that. This is an enormous circulation. It means as the thing is usually figured about 2,000,000 readers, because it is estimated that at least five people read each paper sold.

Mr. Hearst is eager to swell the circulation of the Sunday AMERICAN to 500,000, and, as a matter of fact, I don't think you can stop it! So far as I know, nobody is going to try to stop it, and they couldn't if they did try. Do you know why? Let me tell you:

THE BOSTON AMERICAN, SINCE THE FIRST DAY IT WAS PRINTED, HAS BEEN ON THE LEVEL AND IT HAS GIVEN THE PUBLIC THE GOODS!

I'm writing this in the same manner that I would tell it at my home, at your home, or if I were talking to a friend in the street, in a restaurant or hotel, or if I were in Portland, Me., or Portland, Or.

I ought to know something about the Boston AMERICAN and Mr. Hearst. I have worked for him since he bought the Journal in New York sixteen years ago.

I came to Boston a couple of months before the AMERICAN was started, found the building it is printed in and have been here since. I know personally Mr. Hearst and most of the big men who have helped to make his newspapers. And from the standpoint of a newspaper man who doesn't have to lie about it and never had to lie about anything else, for that matter, in more than twenty years' experience with Mr. Hearst and one other publisher—I say that one of the puissant reasons why the Boston AMERICAN has reached its present height in circulation, advertising patronage and influence, is because IT HAS ALWAYS FOUGHT FOR THE RIGHT AS GOD HAS GIVEN IT TO SEE THE RIGHT.

You will recall that right after the paper made its appearance in Boston it took up the gas fight. That was a big fight, and about the first fight of the character that was ever attempted in Boston. The gas company was and is a pretty powerful corporation. But that didn't cause the AMERICAN to hesitate. Boston people paid a dollar for their gas then. Now Boston is paying 80 cents for gas. In these days of exorbitant prices for the necessities of life this saving is a mighty important one.

Massachusetts about that time was getting pretty tired of the Republican machine, which just now is being pretty roundly denounced by Republican candidates themselves, and the AMERICAN stepped into the political arena. Mr. Douglas was elected Governor—the first Democratic Governor in a good many years.

I mention these simply as sample incidents of what this newspaper has done, and what all of Mr. Hearst's other newspapers have done in New York, Chicago, San Francisco and Los Angeles. I'VE NEVER KNOWN THEM TO FIGHT FOR A CROOK OR A CROOKED INSTITUTION. I HAVE KNOWN THEM TO PUT SCORES OF CROOKS BEHIND PRISON BARS AND SCORES OF CROOKED INSTITUTIONS OUT OF EXISTENCE.

I've chatted with a great many newspaper men in Boston, in other New England cities and in cities outside of New England about what it meant to us as newspapermen when Mr. Hearst came to Boston. It meant practically the first decent salaries that newspaper men ever got in this city, not only on the AMERICAN, but on other newspapers. It meant the same thing in New York, and it means the same thing wherever the Hearst newspaper goes. Mr. Hearst not only believes in paying the highest wages in the world, but he does it.

To start the Boston AMERICAN and build it to the point where it is to-day meant the expenditure of millions of dollars. People in Boston and New England got most of the dollars. The managing editor told me just a few minutes ago that this institution pays out about $30,000 a week, which is more than a MILLION AND A HALF IN A YEAR.

It costs money to run a newspaper, and lots of it. I ran one myself once. That's the reason I'm working for Mr. Hearst now for a salary. I get it—now.

No other newspaper can afford to pay the salaries that Mr. Hearst pays to such men and women as Arthur Brisbane, Morrill Goddard, Ella Wheeler Wilcox, Herbert Kaufman and the incomparable staff of artists and others who help to make the daily and Sunday AMERICAN.

This doesn't mean that Mr. Hearst pays these great writers, editors and artists out of his private funds. They are paid out of the money they help to make. ALL OF THE HEARST PAPERS PAY IN TIME, AND GENERALLY IT IS A REMARKABLY SHORT TIME AT THAT.

When the Boston AMERICAN began it occupied one building. Now it occupies most of a block and has jumped across the street. Some of these days I hope to see it occupying the biggest newspaper building in New England. It has the biggest and the best presses made. Nothing else, it may be readily seen by anybody, would do for a Hearst newspaper.

I could give facts and figures about the amount of paper used, the amount of ink, the number of folded papers printed in an hour, and so on, but I'd rather express the SIZE AND POWER of the paper in another way. I think you'll find it more interesting.

About everybody in New England knows personally or by reputation Miss Mary Boyle O'Reilly. She is the gifted daughter of the great poet and orator, John Boyle O'Reilly. She has written many splendid articles for the Sunday AMERICAN. The fight that she made to drive "baby farms" out of New Hampshire, last year, will be recalled by many.

Here's something that hasn't before been printed about that: Miss O'Reilly found that one of the worst places was owned by a chief of police. It was a shocking place. If the whole truth were told about it, it would horrify readers of this newspaper. Miss O'Reilly was particularly set on driving this den of iniquity out of existence.

She went to the local authorities and complained. They did nothing. She went to one of the highest officials of the State. He promised to take action. But he didn't. Miss O'Reilly waited what she regarded as a sufficient length of time.

Then she went back to this State official. This is what she said:

"IF YOU DON'T CLOSE THAT PLACE IN A WEEK I'LL TELL THE BOSTON AMERICAN."

AND THE PLACE WAS CLOSED IN TWO DAYS!

This incident not only pays a high tribute to the POWER of the AMERICAN, but it is an appreciation of the fact that when this newspaper knows of a great wrong it stands ready to do its best to right it.

Take a more recent example. In last Sunday's AMERICAN there was printed a story of the annual sewing up of Hull by the Nantasket Steamboat Company, that had announced that it would take off several of its boats on Monday. This company had been doing just what it pleased in this regard for twenty years, and nobody seemed to think that it would do any good to make a fight.

When one of the men connected with the concern heard that the Sunday AMERICAN was going to print the story he assumed the arrogant attitude that had characterized them for years. He called up the paper and ordered it not to print his picture, with the same assurance that he had ordered the boats cut off.

But the article was published, and so was the man's picture, and even before the ink was dry on the paper the Nantasket Steamboat Company had reversed itself and the steamers were kept running. Here was a case where the knowledge that the facts were to be printed had effect even before the paper came out.

Now, let me tell you this—and I want you to believe just what I say, and that I know what I'm talking about—THERE'S NO POWER ON EARTH THAT CAN PREVENT THIS NEWSPAPER FROM TELLING THE TRUTH.

I've recalled all this more particularly to give point to something else that Mr. Hearst is about to do for the readers of the Sunday AMERICAN, and that is, give them a HIGH-CLASS MONTHLY MAGAZINE ABSOLUTELY FREE.

The first issue of this magazine will be with next Sunday's AMERICAN. I have seen it, and it is one of the finest publications of the kind that ever came from a press. It is a magazine that will interest and entertain every member of the home.

It is written and illustrated by the best people that money can procure. It opens with a new serial story by Elinor Glyn. It has short stories, bright articles, beautiful pictures, with the pastel of a girl on the first page that you'll want to frame and hang up in your room.

It will take nearly 2,500,000 of these magazines to supply all of the Hearst Sunday papers. That's the biggest publication in the world, so far as I know. A few years ago it would have been impossible to print, fold and bind any such production.

NOW THE READERS OF THE SUNDAY AMERICAN GET IT REGULARLY AS A GIFT.

This does not mean that a single feature of the Sunday AMERICAN, as you find it to-day, will be omitted. They'll all be there next Sunday, and better than they are to-day, if that is possible. I don't think that there's ever anything quite good enough for the Hearst newspapers. It has looked that way to me, anyhow, enough times!

The addition of this new magazine to the Sunday AMERICAN is in keeping with the constant improvement of Mr. Hearst's papers. He was the first man to develop the colored section of a newspaper.

By the way, let me tell you something about Mr. Hearst. He's a pretty well-known man, as that phrase goes, and yet many people have erroneous ideas of him.

Now, for instance, it might surprise many people to know that he works harder and longer hours than he will permit any of his employes to work. Also that he knows minutely every detail of the mechanical end of the publication of his newspapers. If anything gets wrong with one of the giant presses, or typesetting, or typemaking machines, and nobody else about the place knows just what's the matter, Mr. Hearst can tell them and show them how to fix it. When he started to print the colored sections, Mr. Hearst went to Paris, where they were doing it, and worked among the men until he thoroughly understood the process.

I have been asked many times if Mr. Hearst really writes anything that appears in his newspapers.

He does. He writes every word of every article to which his name is signed, and there's no revision by any other person in any of the Hearst offices.

I had the peculiar pleasure of demonstrating a phase of this fact to a good many curious newspaper men in various cities of the United States during the last Presidential campaign. I accompanied Mr. Hearst and Mr. Hisgen in their coast-to-coast speaking trip, representing the Hearst newspapers.

It was on that trip that Mr. Hearst did the greatest service to the country and made the most brilliant speeches, according to me, as the late Edward Everett Hale was wont to say, of his life.

You will recall those famous Standard Oil letters and the addresses Mr. Hearst made in presenting them to the country. They were the most forcible factors that were ever introduced in a presidential campaign, and meant the political doom of more than one man.

Those speeches, an echo of which is still heard throughout country, were written by Mr. Hearst usually on trains, and sometimes in hotels. AND THERE WAS NOBODY ALONG TO WRITE THEM BUT MR. HEARST. Mrs. Hearst was with her husband, but she didn't write them. Mr. Hearst's eldest son was along. He was about four then and hadn't begun to make political speeches. Mr. Hisgen was busy with his own troubles, and I didn't, and couldn't.

But I did take Mr. Hearst's manuscript often, written on newspaper copypaper in pencil or with a fountain pen, and help manifold it for the newspapers, and when the reporters came for the speeches in the big cities of the country I often showed them the original of the speeches in Mr. Hearst's own handwriting.

There are some pretty good writers on the Hearst newspapers, but if they have one outside of Mr. Hearst himself who could have written the brilliant, epigrammatic, unanswerable argument that Mr. Hearst made for reciprocity and printed in the London Budget, and which was reprinted in last Sunday's AMERICAN, he has got to show me!

I'm writing this about Mr. Hearst here because it's the first time I ever had a chance to write it so that it would reach so many people, and I've wanted to say it for years.

We who work for Mr. Hearst want a circulation of 500,000, and WE WANT IT RIGHT AWAY, for the Sunday AMERICAN. He's done his part, and it is up to us and the readers of the paper who appreciate the efforts that have honestly been made to make a fight for the common good in Boston and the rest of New England, to do ours.

Four hundred thousand people buy the Sunday AMERICAN now. If about ONE IN FIVE would call attention to the new magazine feature of next Sunday's paper, or say something else equally as effective, we'd have the 500,000 next Sunday.

I'm going to get my NEW READER TO-DAY.

MILLIONS OF SCHOOL CHILDREN

Copyright, 1911, by the Sunday American-Journal Examiner.

All the Future of This Country Is in the Children That Fill the Schools To-day---BY FAR THE BEST OPPORTUNITY IS THAT OF THE PUBLIC SCHOOL CHILD.

THE public schools of this country have begun again their great work of civilization and enlightenment.

Millions of children, tens of thousands of teachers, from ocean to ocean, have begun their annual task of driving in knowledge, and driving out the blackness of ignorance and superstition.

The poor child that lives at home in an atmosphere of ignorance now enters into the light. The ghost stories that have been told, the foolish, mind-disturbing yarns, are counteracted and driven away.

The boy or girl that has been spoiled at home, and unfitted for life and competition, learns in the public school lessons in democracy, in equality, and is prepared for success in later years.

Fortunate are the children whose mothers and fathers send them to the public schools, to the democratic atmosphere, to the school that gives them this chance for success hereafter.

Much to be pitied are those children whose fathers' poor judgment or vanity deprives them of the chance that every American boy or girl should have.

The private school, however well-managed, however few the scholars, or however numerous the teachers, lacks the most important element of American education, which is democratic equality.

On those public school benches are sitting men and women of the future, the rulers of this country, the mothers of the men that are to do the big work of the world fifty years from now.

Somewhere, carefully avoiding study, perhaps, or wilfully making himself a nuisance, is the boy that will accomplish the task demanding the power of will.

And near him, and tormented by him, sits the studious boy whose mind will solve the great scientific problem.

No more beautiful picture can present itself to the mind than that of many millions of children, taught absolutely without charge, at the cost of the State, by the ablest, most devoted men and women.

The children should be taught obedience and respect. They should be made to feel that the public school means to them opportunity, success and honor later on. Every father and mother can impress upon the children the value of knowledge, and should do so.

Under no conditions should children be driven to over-study. A child's health should be watched even more carefully than its learning. Ability to read intelligently, plus good health, will take a man through this world, after all, and give him almost every opportunity, if he will use his ability to read.

But all knowledge without health means misery always, and failure often, and the parents should remember that.

In some of the schools, unfortunately, accommodations are lacking for all the children, and those children are compelled to attend "part time" classes.

An especially important duty rests upon the parents of children that attend "part time" classes only. Such children should be kept healthfully and pleasantly occupied during the hours when they are out of school and when other children are in school. They should be guarded from the demoralization which results from this condition. They should be encouraged to spend the hours of freedom healthfully in the parks. They should be kept out of the streets wherever that is possible in our vilely arranged big cities.

For many children, delicate in health, the part-time classes would be desirable, if arrangements were made for their healthful occupation during the free hours.

And no child need suffer, in the long run, under the part-time system, if he studies earnestly during the short hours, and plays and accumulates health earnestly during the extra leisure hours.

One other word to the fathers and mothers. If you have a delicate child, ambitious and nervous, PROTECT IT FROM OVER-STUDY. Remember that no ounce of vitality and health should be used on books until the body has all that it needs for its growth.

Remember, that if a delicate child misses a year of schooling, that is nothing. It can easily catch up. But if a delicate child misses a year of health, that may be irrevocable and fatal.

Get your doctor's permission to keep your child from school, if you think it should stay at home. Keep it in the fresh air and at play.

Remember that, over and over, the most delicate, sickly children have developed into the greatest and most useful men and women. The possession of a finely-organized brain often makes upon the child's strength a drain that weakens the body. That brain means success and triumph later on.

And, fathers and mothers, don't be discouraged about the boy or girl that the other children or the teachers call stupid. Sometimes the stupid child is the child whose mind is so strong in one direction that it can't be bent in another.

As a child, Newton was believed by his teacher and by his mother to be the stupidest boy in the school. Yet we know now that his brain, in the great field of mathematics, was the finest ever born upon this earth.

Napoleon was dull at school, sulky, unpopular. He was called a stupid little Corsican by the French boys that were studying with him to become officers in the army. He never learned to spell correctly even but he had all the other boys in that military school working under his orders, and he had kings sitting in his ante-room, later on, waiting for a chance to talk to him.

Your child may not be later a Newton or a Napoleon. But he is your child. He is WHAT YOU MADE HIM, and nothing else.

And inculcate respect for teachers, always.

Among those teachers there are many that might have made great success and fortune for themselves. They are content to be the teachers of the world, the world's most useful workers, but workers poorly paid, whose labor is never recognized at its full value, and whose glory is in the future achievements of the human race, a glory that comes when the teachers are dead.

Protect and encourage your children in whom you live again.

AND HONOR PUBLIC SCHOOL TEACHERS, CREATORS OF THE CIVILIZATION OF THE FUTURE.

BIX—Hello, Dix, old man what's the matter? You seem pretty rocky.

DIX—Rocky! If I felt any rockier I'd need blasting.

BIX—I'm not very well myself My wife advises me to throw up everything and take a sea voyage

DIX—The doctor says I'm threatened with brain fever

DIX—You? Impossible!

BIX—Say, you make my blood boil

DIX—Then you owe me for sterilizing your system

BIX—I can't enjoy my meals a bit lately.

DIX—Neither do I. Meals to me are merely guideposts to take medicine by.

BIX—I wish I had the appetite I had when I was a boy

DIX—I don't. I didn't have to pay my board then

BIX—It's hard to be poor.

DIX—I've always four it easy enough

BIX—I hear your uncle died recently. Did he remember you in his will?

DIX—Yes, I owed him a hundred and he directed his lawyers to collect it.

BIX—I saw Owens to-day. He's in a hole again.

DIX—Again? Say, what the dickens is he—a man or a woodchuck?

BIX—A friend of mine I. getting married next week and I don't know what to give him. He's an undertaker

DIX—A berry set would be appropriate

BIX—By the way, Dix, perhaps you can tell me something. How are lobsters caught?

DIX—Don't ask me I'm no chorus girl

BIX—You've been abroad Do you understand French?

DIX—A few times only

BIX—At times?

DIX—Yes, when I talk it to myself

BIX—Met Miss Manners on the street to-day. She gave me a nasty look

DIX—Oh, come, now; don't blame her for that You had it before

BIX—I hear that Bagley's wife has run off with another man. They say she was a paragon before she married Bagley

DIX—No, she wasn't; she was a Parker. I knew her family well

BIX—How is it, Dix, whenever you come in here you act the fool?

DIX—I believe in the saying, when in Rome, do as the Romans do.

BIX—Speaking of proverbs, do you also believe that ignorance is bliss?

DIX—I guess so; you seem to be happy.

BIX—Huh! And that a cat has nine lives"

DIX—Yes, but the frog beats it A frog can croak every minute

BIX—Vigilance is the price of liberty, they say

DIX—Not when you're married. It's alimony

BIX—Say what you like about alimony, I'll tell you one thing

DIX—And what's that?

DIX—I suppose you are insured

BIX—Yes, for ten thousand in favor of my wife.

DIX—Ten thousand! Great guns! What excuse do you put up to your wife for living?

BIX—Isn't that Miss Chatters going by in her auto? Nice girl that.

BIX—Anyway, she never repeats scandalous stories

DIX—Repeats! No, she starts them.

BIX—Handsome car she's got. Say, Dix, can you tell me why it is a wonder automobiles go at all?

DIX—I'm the interlocutor. Why, Mr. Bones?

BIX—Because the wheels are tired before the start.

DIX—Help! Help! My, but ain't you the cut-up! By the way, saw you at the opera last night.

BIX—Did you, notice Miss Bahr sitting in a box without a thing on her shoulders?

DIX—Without a thing on her shoulders? Why, man, your eyes were on them the entire evening

BIX—Do you go in for golf now?

DIX—No, I go out for it, as usual.

BIX—I tell you marriage changes a man

DIX—Yes, and also takes his change.

BIX—Where did you go on your honeymoon?

DIX—Broke.

BIX—Bought a lot to-day

DIX—Investment or speculation?

BIX—It was a cemetery lot

DIX—Speculation. You bought it for a rise. Now there's a thing you don't catch me buying, a cemetery lot

BIX—Why not? You've got to die.

DIX—True, but I might be drowned at sea, and then look at the money wasted

BIX—I hear that you won your lawsuit. Get much?

DIX—I should say I did. Got almost enough to pay my lawyer.

BIX—It has just leaked out that your brother is married.

DIX—You may take that for a solid fact.

BIX—How can it be a solid fact if it leaked out?

DIX—Not bad that—for you. See that young lady crossing the street? I saved her life once.

BIX—How?

DIX She said she'd rather die than marry me, and I didn't insist.

BIX—I say, Dix, lend me $20 until the 1st, will you?

DIX—Sorry, old chap! But I can lend you $1 until the 20th, if that will do.

BIX—What have you got in the box?

DIX—Insects to put on my wife's plants. She won't let me smoke except to kill the insects

BIX—I'm looking for a good tailor. How is Shears? Can you recommend him?

BIX—See here, Dix. Did you tell Brown last night that I was a liar?

DIX—Why, no; I thought he knew.

BIX—I'll fight any man who calls me a liar, if he weighs a ton.

DIX—Well, I came pretty near saying it then didn't I?

BIX—But you don't weigh a ton. I notice that they've taken off the early morning train on your line Do you miss it?

DIX—Oh, yes; but I used to miss it when it was on Well, I'm off now. Do you know that my dog meets me every evening at the station?

BIX—I don't see how he knows when to be at the train.

DIX—It's simple enough I keep a time table hanging up in his kennel. Well, so long, Bixy, old man.

[He goes out.]

NEW YORK wins the championship [illegible] cost of suffering [illegible] death knell of [illegible] if not in the entire country. Not since the beginning of the present century has there been such an exhibition of brutality in the national game as appeared yesterday afternoon. Two men terribly bruised and compelled to go to the hospital, three pairs of dress trousers irreparably ruined, and two collars badly soiled is the record of the deplorable [illegible] veterans Airship Line. They were immediately taken for a tour of the city, Percy Van Algernon acting as host and guide. The visitors were [illegible] of the old St. Nicholas Skating [illegible] than a hundred years ago, two notorious characters named Larry Pollok and Johnny Dunn, erected a platform and engaged men to pummel each other [illegible] players were greeted by the greatest crowd that has ever gathered at a baseball [illegible]. The stands were [illegible] T[illegible] costumes of 1911, those in the grand stand wearing harem skirts and those in the bleachers the bobble [illegible] Pink highballs, made from the finest brand, were served [illegible] the garden during the game, while the ladies were presented with phyrotypes of the players wearing the New York colors, pink and blue.

The game was called at 4 o'clock, Arbitrator Keane being in charge. The players lined up as follows:

New York.	Position.	Philadelphia
Van Algernon	First Toss	Percy De Vere
Leffingwell	Second Toss	Reginald De Vere
Sturtevant	Scuds	Wright [illegible]
Lamkgworth	First Prevent	Drexelbuilt
Hollingston	Second Prevent	McCormick

New York took the field [illegible] Van Algernon tried the first toss, coming within three inches of dropping the ball through the [illegible]. Leffingwell was no more successful, but Sturtevant succeeded in tossing the first hole of the game. He dropped the ball [illegible] endeavors to present the point, soiled his hands, and also allowed several specks of dust to light on his collar. The game was stopped long enough to enable the player to wash his hands and change his collar.

The first [illegible] ended with New York two holes to the good. The score at this [illegible] Van Algernon made a perfect throw on his first toss and, amid cheers of the crowd, the ball dropped through the hole.

In the Philadelphia [illegible] Percy De Vere met with the accident which will [illegible] put him out of the game for the balance of the season. [illegible] for his injuries consist [illegible] De Vere [illegible] was also a great favorite with New York [illegible] his genial manners and courtesy [illegible] was made [illegible] him as one of those players who are respected [illegible] the game.

It was while tossing the third ball [illegible] he received his injuries. As the dinner had been paid for I consented. Oh, we had a lovely time. But you know she met a friend of hers at the next table and talked to him the whole time. Try as I might I couldn't attract her attention, couldn't get a word in edgewise or longwise. Finally I noticed a small bit of thread protruding from her peek-a-boo waist. Having nothing else to do I pulled it. When I got through pulling it there were several yards of thread under the table.

What Will Be the Price She'll Pay?

ONE of the exquisite and wonderfully clever illustrations from the pen of Howard Chandler Christy, illustrating David Graham Phillips's story, "THE PRICE SHE PAID," which begins in the current issue of the Cosmopolitan Magazine. All the wonderful insight into women's hearts and lives that Mr. Phillips had is concentrated in this story which tells of a woman's love and her struggle to make a place for herself. This drawing is printed by permission of the Cosmopolitan Magazine.

IN all her life she had never considered the cost of anything. Money-making was not for ladies. Like all women she was a parasite and a spender. She looked upon the men who worked for her as menials, as makers, shop attendants, cooks, etc. But, as she now realized, it is one thing to pass upon the work of others, another thing to do work oneself.

I met an old friend in the next [illegible] restaurant," said the stepfather. "He has invited us to take Thanksgiving dinner with his family. I declined for us both. You [illegible] I'd not have a cent [illegible] that [illegible] one night. But the [illegible] house, new furniture and everything [illegible] doing by the photos he showed me. A regular palace! He'll not be an outlaw long, I guess."

Did you say [illegible] for me?" asked Mrs. Preston.

She can have him if she wants to," replied Presbury. "I'm not sure [illegible] to know her that he's a stiff [illegible]

Presbury looked at Mildred with a grin. "He's just the husband for Mildred. She can't afford to be too particular. Somebody's got to support her. I can't and won't, and she can't support herself."

"You'll go, won't you, Mildred?" said her mother. "He may not be so bad."

"Yes, I'll go," said Mildred. Her gaze was upon the untouched food on her plate.

"Of course she'll go," said Presbury. "And she'll make him if she can. Won't you?"

She lifted her tragic eyes and looked hardly at him. She said:

"Yes, I'll go. And I'll marry him if I can."—From The Price She Paid, by David Graham Phillips. Copyright, 1911, by [illegible] Magazine.

Our History of the World.

By A. JOSH, Doctor of Gravity, Fellow of the Rollicking Geographical Society, Encyclopaedic Explorer, Etc., Etc., Etc.

(Copyright, 1911, by American Journal-Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved.)

PUBLISHER'S NOTE—This, the third instalment of our sensational and up-to-the-minute History of the World, is further on the chronicles of people and things, which have puzzled mankind as the world's meeting men of letters, men and things.

CHAPTER VII.

ASIA MINOR is full of history, ruins, traditions and unspeakable Turks, yet it was a grand old country back in the days when it embraced Lydia.

Now Asia Minor had a perfect right to embrace Lydia, because Asia Minor was not married and Lydia was a kingdom, not a woman.

Its chief city to-day is Smyrna, quite a shipping centre. It is here one can arrange for more dates than in any other section of the world outside the Great White Way. They ship figs with the dates.

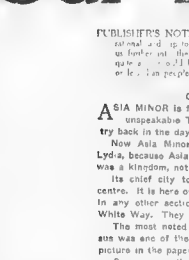
Croesus was the last King of Lydia. Croesus was so wealthy they used to say "As rich as Croesus." They say it to this day, for that matter, and yet were he living to-day he wouldn't have funds enough to butt into society, much less keep an automobile.



But good old Croesus was not unlike some wealthy men of to-day. He was a friend of men of learning, and it is said he used to keep thirty-four brickyards going turning out "books" for libraries he endowed.

Cyrus, the same country yap who destroyed Babylon, put the kibosh on Lydia, and poor old Croesus was killed when the tip that made the appendix of one of his books fell on him. They didn't know how to remove appendices in those days.

A great friend of Croesus was Kid Aesop, the George Ade of his day. He lived at the court of Croesus, who often told him he was making a great mistake that he didn't syndicate his stuff in the big Sunday papers.

In a quiet little valley in this country was the home of the Princess made famous by the Brothers Grimm, the "Sleeping Beauty." This city was Philadelphia, and the descendants of the Sleeping Beauty are living to-day in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, United States.

CHAPTER VIII

Job Lot of Information Concerning A.

ASIDE from Noah's celebrated houseboat and Mohammed's instalment prayer rugs, there were many interesting things in Asia.

India, for instance, was a busy section of that country and has furnished a few thousands of people, even of to-day, who are too virtuous to work.

One can dig up more cults out of India than there are shades of porous plaster in a million-dollar pony ballet girls. With a sufficiently mysterious cult and a slick article of conversation an adept can certainly make a great hit among that class of people to-day who have worn all other frills and thrills to a frazzle and need a change.

From Hindustan came the Brahmin. They are famed after a long [illegible] to spend round [illegible] among the cows.

Brahma was a wonder. By [illegible] statue of him one may glean that he was not only the original squatter," but also the [illegible] being well fitted for this modern past [illegible] of three heads.

The female Brahmins were [illegible] one head, which proves the Brahmins were no fools. How would you like to provide millinery for a wife with three heads?

But to resume. The statue of the real Brahmin shows him with four arms. A man with four arms could certainly beat the ordinary individual to it in making love. In this statue Brahma proves he was some sport. In his upper right hand he holds a monocle through which he seems to be peering anxiously. In his lower right hand he holds a necklace of pearls, evidently looking for some fair Brahminette to hand the pearls to. He is more of a sport on his left side, as in his upper left hand he holds what scientists have agreed is a Schnitzel sandwich, while his lower left hand tenderly caresses a decanter.

Then there are the followers of Buddha. Bud was originally called Boodha, which meant "boodle," and in that form has worshippers to-day in every quarter of the globe, if not elsewhere.

PERSONALLY, it's an awful bother to be sentimental. I am not up to it. I like you because you have good sense; you know how to preside at a dinner table, you look pretty; and you're not the kind that gets talked about. But sentiment! That's the sort of thing that would make me marry some chorus girl.

WHEN I heard that the Duke of Wallshire had seventy million dollars I thought maybe his grandfather was a retired brewer, but when they told me his was one of the oldest titles in England I knew the money must have come in a pe[illegible] marrying some woman who had it.

THERE are very few aristocrats in America. Aristocracy is not a question of birth. It is a condition of mind. A gentleman may be an aristocrat, but it doesn't follow that an aristocrat is a gentleman. An aristocrat may be a king, a banker, a thief or a tramp. But he won't be a merchant, a salesman, a clerk or a beggar. There are people who think too much of what other people have to be aristocrats.

CHAPTER IX.

Africa.

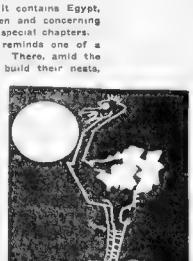
AFRICA is a great pear-shaped continent with the stem at Suez. They tried to pick this pear by digging the Suez Canal, but Africa seems to hang around about in the same locality.

It is separated from America by the Atlantic Ocean, from Europe by the Mediterranean Sea and from its lions, wart hogs and timid gazelles by T. Roosevelt. In the olden days it was separated from its inhabitants by slave traders.

While Africa is called one of the grand divisions of the globe, it is less known than any other. There is something shady about its inhabitants, who are so highly civilized they no longer work for a living, or air their matrimonial troubles in the courts. In fact they do not wash their linen in public, for, strange as it may seem, they have neither linen nor scandals, except possibly where the white people have settled.

Africa is chiefly noted because it contains Egypt, of which volumes have been written and concerning which the author will devote some special chapters.

But as a whole this continent reminds one of a little journey through a menagerie. There, amid the tropical splendor, the cooing lions build their nests, while timid little hippopotami scamper about the greensward or come begging the natives for bits of food. Monstrous snakes of varied hue and size slide about the landscape with a freedom and naturalness that could be appreciated only by a graduate from some dipsomaniac university.



Ostriches trill their matin song from the tops of waving palms, the horned gnu chirps plaintively for his mate in the moonlight, while the cute little crocodiles play about the nursery floors and cackle with delight when some one tosses them a lump of sugar.

The Desert of Sahara is considerable of a sand lot, being about equal in area to the United States and as dry as the morning after the night before. Except for an occasional oasis there are no drinking places in the vast desert and these are but instruments of torture to the traveler, for he generally dies of disappointment upon finding they contain only water.

A gentleman named "Ham," the dark horse—or, rather, black sheep—of Mr. Noah's family, settled in Egypt shortly after that suffragette convention that broke up the tower of Babel. To him may be credited the beginning of darkest Africa.

(This will be continued next Sunday.)

In the AMERICAN'S Great

$10,000 Proverb Contest

Must be at the Contest Dept., No. 275 Devonshire Street, by 5 o'clock P. M., September 30, or must bear postmarks showing that they were mailed prior to that hour on that day, otherwise they will not be considered in the awarding of the prizes.

Special Notice to Contestants!

Each envelope or package, containing sets of solutions, should be plainly marked on outside:

"Answers to Proverb Puzzles"

As previously announced, answers sent in list form will not be considered. Each answer must be on a SEPARATE COUPON form, either the printed form clipped from the American or a copy of same.

Conditions of the Contest—Read Carefully

THE BOSTON AMERICAN PROVERB CONTEST is a contest of skill and judgment. Prizes to the amount of $10,000 will be given absolutely free by the Boston American to the winners. Every one in New England, irrespective of age, may be a prize winner.

In each set of answers to each picture, only one answer to each picture, but each person may submit as many complete sets of answers.

The answers must be written on the typewriter or may be printed in any manner to suit the taste of the contestant.

Any of the contestants in any other contest now being run or which may be run by the Boston American, or the members of their families, may be a loser in submitting answers in this contest, but each and all members of the family will be allowed to submit answers. Each set of answers will be treated separately, and each one answer to every picture.

Each set will be considered separately, but no contestant can win more than one prize. All employees of the American and their families are absolutely barred from participating in this contest.

In case there are no complete lists of correct answers, prizes will be awarded to the persons submitting the nearest correct solutions. In case of a tie, award will be made to the one whose answers are received first. In the event of a tie, it will be decided in that way the contestants will receive similar prizes.

Do not send your answers now. Keep them over night, over day, to-day, and at the end of the week arrange them in numerical order and then send them all in at one time.

Judges' decision rendered absolutely final. Every one agrees to send in their answers now, as soon as ready, and not to wait until the last day. Answers will not be considered.

Time will not be a factor in awarding the prizes. The first answers sent in after the contest opens will stand no better chance of winning a prize than the last answers received.

All answers must be delivered at the BOSTON AMERICAN CONTEST HEADQUARTERS, 275 Devonshire Street, Boston, Mass., BY 5 O'CLOCK P. M. SEPTEMBER 30TH, OR MUST BEAR POSTMARKS SHOWING THAT THEY WERE MAILED PRIOR TO THAT HOUR ON THAT DAY, OTHERWISE THEY WILL NOT BE CONSIDERED IN THE AWARDING OF THE PRIZES.

The American will not be responsible for the loss or of any answers unless sent by registered mail and addressed to "PROVERB CONTEST EDITOR, 275 Devonshire Street, Boston, Mass."

NO CLAIMS OF ANY CHARACTER WILL BE CONSIDERED AFTER THE ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE DATE OF THE PUBLICATION OF PRIZE WINNERS IN THE COLUMNS OF THE AMERICAN.

In case contestants desire further information they should address their questions to PROVERB CONTEST EDITOR, Boston American, 275 Devonshire Street, Boston, Mass.

There will be seventy-five puzzle pictures in the series used in the contest. The solutions of these pictures may be sent in on the coupons printed in the Daily and Sunday American, or may be written on separate slips of paper. The use of the coupon is desirable, but not necessary.

The Judges of the PROVERB CONTEST reserves the right to make any change or addition to these conditions that he may deem necessary for properly conducting the contest, and also to pass on any question which may arise. His decision is final.

The Girls He Liked

THIS IS THE LITTLE GIRL HE FIRST FELL IN LOVE WITH. (DRAWN ESPECIALLY FOR THIS NEWSPAPER BY HARRISON FISHER.) COPYRIGHT 1911 BY AMERICAN—EXAMINER.

HARRISON FISHER is one of the leading portrayers of feminine loveliness in America. His types of beautiful women are known in Europe as well as in the United States. The Harrison Fisher Girl has become an institution.

And yet Mr. Fisher is a bachelor. Still early in middle life, far from bad looking, wealthy and of an amiable disposition, he has none of the vagaries that usually make life with the artistic temperament unbearable. That he remains unappropriated by a Mrs. Harrison Fisher when his eye is so keen for charming, beautiful girls, is as much a mystery as why in the last five years the Harrison Fisher Girl has changed three times from her original type

Publicly Mr. Fisher gives as his reason for being unattached that he is "too busy." Privately he admits that the same reasons that have made him flit three times from his types have a great deal to do with his matrimonial state of mind.

"If I could ever find a girl who came up so closely to my ideal that I felt I'd keep on drawing her as long as I could draw, I would probably marry her—if she would have me," says Mr. Fisher.

Here on this page the illustrator has drawn the first girl he was in love with—the little plump person sitting at the piano. The first thousand or more girls he turned out were his idea of this little girl grown up anywhere between seventeen and twenty-two. Here he shows, too, the kind of girl he fancied she would grow up to be. This is his premiere type.

Then he was a tall, awkward youth of seventeen. He was born in Brooklyn, New York, but spent his boyhood days in a suburb of Oakland, Fruitvale, Cal. He went to school to Alameda on horseback, he and his brother, two sons of Hugo Fisher, himself a well known artist.

Harrison was shy and silent. He was a member of a local band of musicians who played at dances, weddings and picnics. Harrison was assigned to the bass viol, not because he played it well, but because he was the only one tall enough to play it. Throughout the region commonly spoken of as "Across the Bay" he was known as "that big fellow who plays the bull fiddle."

"Enter the first girl," says Mr. Fisher. "She was fifteen, two years younger than I, and pianist of the orchestra. She was a demure little girl with deep blue eyes, fringed with black lashes, and heavy brown hair that she wore in a long braid down her back. She possessed, moreover, what I then thought the greatest of feminine charms, fat legs. She dressed them in white cotton stockings that showed beneath her white muslin dress.

"She was my ideal. But being shy and silent I never told her so and I suffered the torments of jealousy when the first violin had called at her house to practice, a privilege never granted to the humble performer upon the despised instrument, the bellowing 'bull fiddle.'"

The incipient romance was nipped in its not too promising bud by the chill wind of fate. Young Harrison Fisher's mother died. The family was scattered. The home was closed. He went on a sketching trip along the Pacific Coast with his father. The little girl with the thick braids of hair and the corresponding limbs, became a memory. He drew the memory in his first type.

Many years afterward when her boyish adorer had become famous he was reminded by one who had danced to the growling of the big fiddle and its companion instruments, that the little pianist had married a local brewer and had fulfilled amply the promise of her plumpness. She weighed 275 pounds.

The artist has drawn her as he remembers her. Prosaic as her life has become she was the inspiration of the beginning of a famous artistic career. She was the first step in the evolution of an artist's ideal. He has drawn her as she appeared to him then, as he remembers and still idealizes her, for this newspaper. The contrast with the recent drawing of his on this page, shows by what a nearly immeasurable distance the little girl has grown up.

Mr. Fisher's next color page will illustrate and discuss the second stage in the evolution of his ideal.

The Danish Explorer Who Discovered the Earliest Evidences of Christianity in China Describes for the First Time the Strange Modern Troglodytes of the Inner Empire.

THE Danish explorer, Frits Vilh. Holm, of the Royal Yacht Club in Copenhagen and the Royal Asiatic Society of London, was the leader and only white member of a large geological expedition which sold to Sian-fu, the provincial capital of Shensi, in North China, whereupon he brought to the country a tauton monolith replica in limestone of the famous Chinese Nestorian monument of A. D. 781—now, as a loan, in the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York. Mr. Holm nearly lost his life more than once during his perilous travels in the far interior of China, and to-day relates some of his experiences among the unknown cave dwellers of China.

By Frits Vilh. V. Holm, M. R. A. S., etc.

I TURNED around in my saddle and shouted to my interpreter, who was catching up, dusty but serene, in a springless cart of stone-age pattern, some fifty feet behind, whether we shouldn't soon reach our noon-rest place for the day, and he nodded in the affirmative with some little show of hope, I thought.

It was burning hot and none of the members of the caravan had had anything to eat or even drink a nice four in the morning, when we had started on our daily fight westward. We had left the comforts of western civilization far behind us and were there was no need of building houses, for the soft Loess easily yielded to the spade and all one had to do was to dig a cave in the wall of Loess in the vicinity of the highway, and one would have a cool though unventilated, abode during the Summer and a cosy corner in the severest of Winters.

Furniture? There is indeed a minimum. You may occasionally find a chair or two, which you care fully place against the wall in order to make them serve, and you may in the more "aristocratic" caves find an imitation of a table; but striving to reach the ancient walled city of Sian-fu as little time as possible for we knew, that we should at least be able to obtain there an occasional fowl or fish from the Wei River and rice in plenty, imported from South China. But more than three hundred miles of bad, dusty roads, or rather cart tracks in the Loess districts of North China are enough to make one so tired that one likes to step off by the wayside when but half of the travelling day has passed.

The Loess regions of North China offer many problems to the geologist which can hardly be said to have been finally solved yet. The fact remains, however, that "Loess" is a highly useful deposit, which owes its origin either to the action of wind, glaciers or fresh water or possibly a combination of forces. The Loess itself, when dry, may be likened to sandstone in its softest form, but it is yellow and the Chinese call it "Hwang Tuh," meaning yellow earth. It is a wonderful deposit this Loess, and it is found thousands of feet up in the mountains and right down to the banks of the great rivers in North China, which derive their yellow color from it.

Centuries and centuries ago the wealthier ancestor of to-day's poor agricultural toiler found out that otherwise the fire lace as well as the bedsteads, is cut out of the Loess just like the cave itself. A fine, useful, solid thing, like the piece of the bed and is meant as an elevation of Loess a couple of feet from the floor. Underneath are one or more long holes, which during the Winter, are filled with barn straw manure to keep the sleeper hot at least on one side.

It was astonishing to find here, in the heart of one of the oldest nations in the world a condition that seemed to duplicate those strange cave dwellings on Lake Constance, Switzerland, the beehive houses of Cappadocia, and those other strange dwellings in the Otawi Canyon of New Mexico. Of course, cave dwellers who never left the rock at all, I am convinced, belonged to an immeasurably distant period. Yet it seems legitimate to speculate that the same conditions which prompted these primeval men to burrow in the rock were the same that made these Chinese dig in the soft Loess.

Lack of necessary material to erect houses, protection from enemies, warmth in Winter, coolness in Summer—all of these have their part in the digging of the caves of both Chinese and ancient man. Indeed, when one of these cave dwellers suddenly gets in better circumstance he promptly moves into a

The caves of the Cappadocian and New Mexico cave dwellers—not cliff dwellers, since nothing remains of the Chinese in fact we might think that they were not into some cave, but when one beholds these three cases, familiar and weird in both cases the resemblance is extreme. They are covered with a thin layer of lava, but the tufa in which they are formed is like the Loess so soft that it can be carved out like cheese with a knife. But no doubt here, too, the primitive necessities of man made him seek these extreme dusty dwellings, perhaps the Chinese have sought theirs [illegible] the primitive men of Switzerland, the Cappadocians nor the Aztecs of New Mexico we forget. Not only the men but the women so often, and over all the four provinces the rock of the poppy binds in lethargy the minds of the people.

Some of the millions of caves in North China are used as temples. Sometimes we find the entrances to these abodes of Chinese divinities high up on the side of the Loess hills, and upon entering the sombre cave we discern idols, sometimes of burned clay, rarely of stone. At the interesting place, Lungmen—"the Dragon Gate"—in Honan we find however, a collection of innumerable caves, each of which contains at least one "Buddha" carved out of the soft rock—Loess not being found at this particular spot.

Ought We Strike Love Out of Marriage?

The Astonishing Problem of Modern Society Which Elinor Glyn Has Analyzed in Her Newest, Greatest Story.

By Professor Simon Patten,

Professor of Political Economy in the University of Pennsylvania.

ALMOST every divorce court tragedy starts as a love romance. What is wrong? Mistress of convenience seem to start out of the divorce courts. Even when a foreign nobleman marries an American girl. Again, what is wrong?

The multiplication of divorce, the decreasing birth rate, the rising age of marriage are only symptoms according to the latest view of social science of a tremendous and pervasive change in the purpose of marriage.

The Astor-Force wedding, in which a girl presumably marries for love of social position and wealth and the man, much older, marries for love, may have a perfect platonic relationship, is the latest example of the phenomena which have started sociologists and psychologists on their inquiry. The famous Gimbel case, the case of the unkissed bride, brings the same matter up in another form.

Is it, as some scientists say, that marriage for love alone has been a false lead, a sand in the river of progress of mankind, and that it must yield to evolution and change to suit modern conditions?

This problem has seemed so deep, so important to every normal being that Elinor Glyn, the famous English novelist and author of "Three Weeks," has written what is without question her masterpiece upon that subject. She is the first who has dared to take up the question and to carry it to what seems to be to be the logical conclusion.

"Why" is the name given this startling new novel.

Back in the farthest times of man's beginning, after the horde of primitive hid all of every man's hand was more or less against the other. When a man, dwelling alone in his lair, felt early in his life the necessity of a woman, he seized her by brute force from the lair of her father or mother—sometimes from the lair of another husband. Love, in its primitive form, entered into it as the most obvious arrangement as the one factor out of many. The man wanted a comrade whom he could feel sure would not stab him in the back with a stone knife or batter out his brains with a stone maul, he wanted some one who would watch the fire while he was hunting, who would till the little bit of ground he had wrested from the forest, who would breed his children, and, after a fashion, care for his clothes. Later, as man began to tame his world, this ceremony of marriage by capture persisted. The father of the girl would be paid or equivalents in skins or other things, and then the bridegroom, accompanied by his best man would steal his bride from her parents' home. The father and his friends would make a show of resistance. They would throw javelins, arrows and stones at the escaping pair, while the woman pretended to resist her captor. It was the best man's duty to stand off the friends and relatives of the bride while the bridegroom made away with her. The father was supposed to chase the pair.

This was how the primitive honeymoon lasted as long as the father kept up the chase.

This form of marriage by capture exists today in our own marriage ceremonies. The rice and old shoes and other things thrown at the couple take the place of javelins and stones which were thrown in the chase.

Somewhere in the centuries there crept in the idea that love was all and all in marriage. With this idea came exaggerated worship of woman in herself. She was placed upon a pedestal, and [illegible] to be useful to her full capacity, and man became an idolator marrying usually through impulse.

And so, say these psychologists has come about the present disharmonies in marriage—disharmonies that cause our appalling list of divorces and marital unhappiness.

Under this theory the Astor-Force marriage is an absolutely logical one. Miss Force is an excellent tennis player and she can back up Mr. Astor in the game of tennis perfectly. Tennis is quite as important in Mr Astor's sphere as it was for the wife of the caveman to have accurate aim with a boulder when the cave bear attacked them. Miss Force will make a perfect hostess to Col Astor's friends. This is just as important in his sphere as it was for the caveman's wife to have an elementary knowledge of cooking, and a primitive agricultural capacity.

This is the problem which Elinor Glyn, in her new story, "Why," has attacked from every viewpoint.

This newest and best novel of Elinor Glyn begins next week in the new American Sunday Monthly Magazine, which will be given with this newspaper. No one who once begins the story will be satisfied until it is finished. The novel, handsomely illustrated by the distiguished American artist, Edmund Frederick, will appear each month in this splendid new section.

What Will Happen to Her Charming, Loveless, Unkissed Heroine?

ONE marriage in [illegible] is in divorce [illegible] the settlement of [illegible] in the Union are in consultation on what shall be generally known as a uniform divorce law.

Underlying all divorces and unhappiness in marriage will be found a fundamental economic problem based upon the almost universal dependence of women.

When society shall make women financially and under political independent and [illegible] on the fundamental [illegible] was in the dependence of the state and the exercise of the authority born of such dependence. Just so with woman. Once a woman shall become self-supporting, then she shall become self-respecting. When she shall become thoroughly self-respecting and wholly independent, she shall also become a fit companion for her logical mate and meet him on common ground of morality mutual love and affection come, mutual help, mutual interest and every other essential to right living and right thinking comes in logical order and in natural sequence.

The marriage relationship is a law and in fact a contract perfectly proper, but the two parties to this, or any other contract, should make the best bargain possible, always being fair. In the marriage contract woman offers much, gives much and has every right under the law to demand much and get all she can. It is entirely wrong for a man to give all and get nothing, just as it is entirely wrong for a woman to refuse to be an economic factor in the scheme of life as soon as she becomes a wife. A dependent is a pauper whether she be maid, wife or widow.

We are all creatures of emotions, passions and desires. The theme of love is a natural element in the human soul. It is not a foreign germ that has been injected into the body and cultivated. There is no reason why we should not combine love on the one hand and the income earning power on the other, providing society keeps normal men within limits.

If the girl is earning $10 a week and is in contact with men earning $20 a week, she will pick out the kind of man she likes and the man will pick out the kind of woman he likes, and they will have reasons for coupling together and living together.

Then both are equally capable of earning support for their individual needs and therefore are not dependent on each other. This would seem to be perfectly normal.

But then [illegible] to blame the girl who has an allowance, who has position and good looks, good figure and [illegible] selling herself for a [illegible] support, [illegible] supporting herself, and therefore [illegible] be supported. "The Best Dinner I Ever Ate!" Said the Kaiser.

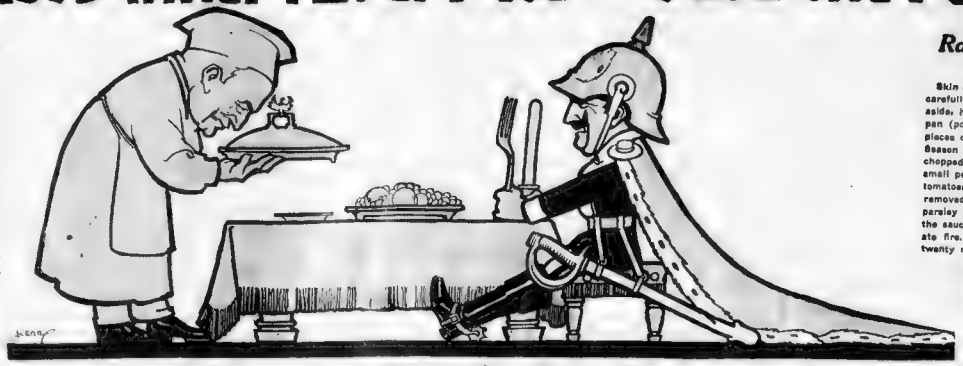
Melting Potatoes a la Bernhardt

CUT the potatoes to the shape of large, elongated olives, and let each weigh about three ounces. Gently cook them in butter, in a saucepan, and take care to turn them over.

When they are cooked, withdraw them, and then slightly flatten them with a fork without breaking them. Drain away their butter; return them to the saucepan with three ounces of fresh butter for every two pounds of their weight, and cook them with lid on until they have entirely absorbed the butter.



Rabbit Saute with Mushrooms

Skin a young rabbit, clean out the entrails carefully and cut it in pieces. Put the liver aside, heat oil, butter and lard in a frying pan (poele) or a shallow saucepan, add the pieces of rabbit and put them on a hot fire. Season with salt and pepper, add an onion chopped fine, a piece of garlic the size of a small pea, a dozen peeled mushrooms, three tomatoes also peeled and chopped with seeds removed, a good sized pinch of chopped parsley and a glass of white wine. Cover the saucepan and finish cooking at a moderate fire. If the rabbit is young, fifteen to twenty minutes will be sufficient cooking.

And Such Dinners as This You Will Be Able to Prepare Every Day from Directions to Be Given in This Series Written by M. Escoffier, the Greatest of Modern Chefs

"American beans are better than the French kind."

"Tomatoes should be cooked in more different ways."

Mons. A. Escoffier, the Celebrated French Chef, Who Next Week Begins a Special Series of Cooking Articles for This Newspaper.

THIS week and next week, by special arrangement with the Hearst International Library, a series of practical articles on the art of cooking by M. Auguste Escoffier, who is by universal consent the most famous chef in the world. These articles begin next week.

In these articles M. Escoffier will initiate American housewives into the secrets of French cookery. He will explain not only how the most delicious dishes that are cooked in the great hotels and restaurants of Europe, but also how a modest meal may be prepared with the greatest economy. In fact, he has as great a reputation for his ability to serve a delicious meal at the least expense as he has for his skill in the culinary art.

M. Escoffier is known and is spoken of as the German Emperor's chief of epicurean staff and as the chief of the cooks of the Emperor of Austria. The fact is that the German Emperor and the Emperor paid a visit to the really hard-boiled monster of the Hamburg-American line, the Amerika. This visit was made in honor of a returning voyage, and the director of the line, to show that it was determined to give his Majesty the best that was possible. With that end in view it was decided that the Emperor should be served by the chief of the Emperor on the ship. After a meal the Emperor, who was by no means too ill to eat well, summoned the chef before him and said:

The great chef bowed his appreciation of the compliment. The Emperor then asked him some questions and learned to his surprise that while serving as a very young man with the French army M. Escoffier had been taken prisoner by the Germans.

"Monsieur Escoffier," the Emperor then said, "I had thought you were a Frenchman, but you are not. You are a German."

"I was, your majesty, but I am no longer," M. Escoffier answered.

M. Escoffier is the owner of scores of chefs now serving in the great restaurants of the world. One of them, for instance, is that exquisite dessert, "peches Melba."

One day in Paris Madame Melba told M. Escoffier that she was very fond of peaches with raspberry juice, and asked him how he could combine them. Here is his recipe:

Poach the peaches in vanilla flavored syrup. Dish them in a timbale upon a layer of vanilla ice cream and coat them with a raspberry puree.

While he is busily plans for writing the cooking secrets of all the world, M. Escoffier said:

"It will give me great pleasure to be able to help the housewives of America. I am not one of those who believe that there is no such thing as American cookery. I am sure that there is, and that it is very good

WHY YOUR BROTHER MAY BE NO RELATION TO YOU.

Why Sisters Can Be More or Less Related--The Newest Remarkable Discoveries in Heredity

No doubt you have all wondered just why one child resembles its father more than its mother, or vice versa, and why another child of the same parents resembles both almost equally. Even more have you wondered why a child should resemble neither its father nor its mother, but one of its grandparents. **

This interesting problem of resemblances has long been understood by the scientists of the Carnegie Institute, and especially those at Cold Spring Harbor, New York

Its solving is one of the great achievements of modern science, and its effects are not confined to humanity, but to the breeding of animals and the propagation of plants in direct relation to their worth as food supply of the world.

Mr. Rene Bache, the distinguished Washington writer, here gives the answer to this riddle of heredity, explains its solving, and recites some of the amazing paradoxes involved in it. His article is authoritative and is a synthesis of his own research into the experiments at the various great institutions that have just discovered the principle

By Rene Bache

EACH child born into the world receives from its parents twenty bundles of inheritance traits. These traits make up the whole child, physically and mentally. Ten are contributed by the mother and ten by the father—normally.

But the mother has twenty such bundles of her own—which she herself inherited—and there is no telling which ten of them she will bestow upon any particular child of hers. This seems to be purely a matter of chance. The same remark applies to the bundles contributed by the father

Each bundle is different and represents qualities, physical and psychical, of innumerable ancestors. And once in a while it happens that, where two children born of the same mother are concerned, she divides her bundles between them in such fashion that none of them is the common property of both. That is to say, one child gets ten of the bundles and the other child receives the remaining ten. Thus it is obvious that so far as their mother is concerned they have no inheritance in common. So far as she is concerned neither is kin to the other. And so far is common understanding goes one child can logically consider itself no kin at all to its mother!

Exactly the same thing may happen in regard to inheritances from the father; and so once in a very long while—the exact mathematical chance is one out of 1,048,576 times—it comes about that two children, born of the same father and the same mother have the inheritance bundles so sorted out between them that not one of the paternal or maternal traits is shared by both Though full brothers and sisters they are not in the least related.

Professor William J. Spillman, of the Department of Agriculture, in conversation the other day put the above statement in this simple form in order to make it clearly comprehensible.

The conclusions drawn from the experiments are not theories, but demonstrated facts. They are reducible to terms of exact figures—for, as now considered, heredity is governed by mathematics; and on that basis its problems are being worked out. The inheritances of any single individual are determined largely by chance, but the system of chances is controlled absolutely by law

One may reasonably ask, how is it known that each human being has exactly twenty bundles of inheritance characteristics? The answer is, because they have been seen and counted. As a matter of literal fact, however, a man has twenty-one such bundles and a woman twenty-two—the additional one in the former case and the extra two in the latter having reference exclusively to sex

The experts in this line of research can now take a living cell from any part of the human body and, with the help of a high power microscope, determine with certainty whether it belonged to a man or a woman. If from a man it will be found to contain twenty-one of the little bundles; if from a woman twenty-two They call the bundles "chromosomes," because for the purpose of convenient observation they readily take certain stains which leave the rest of the cell colorless

These chromosomes may fairly be considered to be of all things in the world the most wonderful carrying as they do all the elements of heredity In the young cell there appears under the microscope what appears like a tiny thread It gradually shortens and thickens until it assumes the shape of a short rod This break up a number of pieces. The pieces are the chromosomes, and each is literally a bundle of inheritance traits in which all the characteristics of body and mind of future children are concealed

Each cell in the one person will have the same twenty-one characteristic chromosomes That is to each person every one of his or her cells will contain the same identical bundles. But whenone considers the immense variety of forms into which the twelve half tones of the musical octave can be formed one can readily perceive what an infinite variety these twenty-four bundles, different in well nigh each of the millions of men and women on the globe, can attain!

And here we have the explanation of that strange freak of inheritance known as "identical twins" Every human being begins existence as a single cell—with its twenty bundles of chromosomes But once in a long while it happens that this cell splits into two—not as in the case of ordinary cells, which start from two cells As a result two children are born which are halves of the same individual in reality, yet each a whole Both have exactly the same bundles of hereditary traits. Necessarily they are always of the same sex and alike to an extraordinary degree They are literally one person in duplicate Usually, as is natural under the circumstances there is a remarkable sympathy between them, their mental and moral, as well as physical, attributes being common to both. Upon which interesting fact, although its reason is unknown, is based not only the very weird story of the elder Dumas, "The Corsican Brothers," but all the legends of uncanny rapport between "identical twins," enriching folk lore and legends

Study of these problems of the bundles has brought out many startling facts. For instance, inasmuch as brothers—or sisters—are born of the same two parents, one would naturally expect to find that they resembled each other more nearly than the father or the mother But in reality it is not so. Scientific observation proves that the resemblances in both cases are pretty nearly equal. In other words, the average boy looks as much like his father as like his brother, and the average girl as much like her mother as like her sister

Why One Grandfather May Be No Relation to You. For the sake of simplicity, the twenty inheritance bundles given to each child are here set as numerals on faces. 1 and 2 represent the twenty bundles of a woman; 3 and 4 the twenty bundles of her husband. The daughter takes ten bundles, represented by 1 from the mother's and ten bundles, represented by 4, from the father. Similarly, 5, 6, 7 and 8 represent the twenty bundles of another man and woman. Their son receives ten bundles, 7, from the father, and ten bundles, 6, from the mother These two, marrying, have a son, who takes ten bundles, or 1, from his mother, and ten bundles, 6, from his father. These factors it will be seen, are represented also in the grandparents. He marries a woman whose inheritance bundles may be represented by X and Y. Their child may take a bundle from the two man and one from the father and have nothing in common with his paternal grandfather or his grandfather's parents.

We have been accustomed to consider likenesses as more surface phenomena working in their way, but of no special consequence. In the light of this recently acquired knowledge on the subject, however, they assume an entirely new and highly important aspect. If, for example, in a large family, two of the children look much more like each other than any of their brothers and sisters the fact may be accepted as indicating that the relationship between them is proportionately closer In other words, they possess more inheritances in common Again, a striking likeness between a man and one out of a number of his nieces and nephews is evidence that the niece or nephew in question is more closely related to him than the others—a circumstance which, one realized, will be likely to influence the fortunes of families, through the making of wills. A niece may be more closely related to a man than his own daughter.

"Measurements of resemblances," applied to stature, length of forearm, finger-reach, color of eyes and many other characteristics, afford the only available means of determining with accuracy the degree of true relationship existing between two individuals. Up to the present time such observations have been restricted to both traits, but study of the subject is now being carried into the domain of mental and moral attributes—with very striking results.

It appears from what has been said that two brothers—or sisters—are just about as closely related as father and son or as mother and daughter More surprising is it to find that a man is not more like to his uncle than to that uncle's son. One would naturally expect the fact to be otherwise But the truth is that first cousins seem to be as nearly related as uncle and nephew—or to put the matter in terms, a man is as closely related to his first cousin as to his uncle or aunt.

This point is of much importance in medical diagnosis. When a physician is called upon to treat a case of serious or chronic disease he is usually obliged to take into consideration the family history. There may be, for instance, a disease taint which has a bearing upon the problem Hitherto in working out such questions it has been customary to exclude cousins. The fact, however, that a man's first cousins resemble him as closely as do his uncles and aunts shows that the cousins, usually more numerous, provide as good material for an estimate of his physiological tendencies as do his parents' brothers and sisters.

"Measurements of resemblance" have been applied on a very extensive and comprehensive scale in order to obtain reliable averages between pairs of cousins; between uncles or aunts and nephews or nieces; between grandparents and grandchildren, and between persons representing various other degrees of consanguinity—always with a view to the accurate recording of traits of likeness

As a resu't, it is found that the average resemblance of a grandson to his grandfather is just about equal to the likeness between niece and uncle or aunt and nephew. In other words, the two relationships are equivalent to each other, in a biological sense. Similar evidence shows that a girl is as closely related to her first cousin as to her grandmother or vice versa.

These newly ascertained facts upset most of our preconceived ideas on a very vital subject. For the first time we are enabled to classify ourselves correctly in respect to family relationships. We know now that the relationships of first cousins to each other, of aunts or uncles to nieces or nephews, of grandparents to grandchildren, are all approximately equal

To be good is normal; to be bad abnormal Thus it happens that when a good woman marries a bad man their children are usually decent citizens. But in cases where two criminals marry each other all of their children are practically sure to be criminals. This fact is illustrated by famous families of criminals. There is one family in New England which for 200 years has produced nothing but criminals, generation after generation

All of which makes it obvious that in view of this new knowledge, we should have laws to prevent, as far as possible, the propagation of criminals, imbeciles and insane persons.

By W. D. Parmelee,

Of the Peabody Museum Expedition to Yucatan.

TULOOM, the lost city of the ancient Mayas of Yucatan, the place of mystery and gloom, which is jealously guarded by the hostile Indians, and which has been visited by white men but once before since its foundation, is being investigated by the Peabody Museum of Harvard University. The only previous white visitor was John Stephens in 1842.

A preliminary expedition, of which I was one, under the direction of Dr. G P. Howe, has just returned from the wild, barren coasts of Yucatan with the news of wonderful buildings and wall paintings buried in the tropical jungle, and with horrible stories of the atrocities committed by the degenerate present day Mayas, the descendants of that once noble race of architects and builders, who, so far as we know, were the first people with a civilization to occupy the American continent.

Tuloom is uncharted on maps and its position hard to find. It is located on the eastern coast of the peninsula of Yucatan, about thirty miles south of the southern point of the island of Cozumel, which is a long strip of land, twenty-five miles off the coast.

The object of our expedition was to look the field over with a view to a later search for manuscripts which might solve the great mysteries of the Mayan race. What is its origin? Where did it get its civilization? Are these early American races as old or older than the Egyptians, Greeks or Romans? Did the Mayas get their civilization from Asia, or did they develop it themselves, or does it antedate the culture of the great races which ruled in Asia?

European Civilization of American Origin?

In fact, did the civilization of the ancient races of the old world originate in America? This possibility is suggested by the startling similarity of Mayan and Asiatic faces, shown on their monuments. Where did the civilized ancient Egyptians come from? They were not aborigines of Egypt. We see a striking resemblance between Mayan hieroglyphs and Egyptian hieroglyphs, between Mayan and Egyptian manuscripts. The ancient legend of Atlantis points to the existence of an early American race, whose civilization was carried to Europe. Whence did the ancient Mycenaeans, the forerunners of Greek culture, come? Their origin is a mystery. The Mayan monuments also suggest a connection with Babylonian civilization.

This all-important question of the American origin of European civilization is one that may be answered by the records at Tuloom.

The question has been unanswerable, and the archaeologists have been obliged to say that the Mayan civilization, as we see it in the temples still more or less extant dates from 100 to 200 B. C., so far as they can judge at present. That it existed in some form for several centuries previous to this is undeniable. The hieroglyphics, which are at present undecipherable, would tell the story could they be read, but with this means of studying their history closed, and with most of the Mayan codices destroyed by fanatical Spaniards who accompanied Cortes and his imitators, all avenues of acquiring knowledge of the history and origin of the Mayas seem to be cut off.

The later Mayas did not carve their history on stone tablets to such a degree as did their forbears, but used instead specially prepared deerskin, on which they wrote and painted the important incidents which occurred both previous to and during their lives.

One great reason why excavation at Tuloom is so pregnant with possibilities is that this is the only city, so far as we know, where there flourished Maya civilization at the time of the Spanish conquest. Thus there is likely to be somewhere under the piles of ruined buildings a codex written in Maya hieroglyphics with the Spanish equivalent on a nearby page. This would be the most important discovery possible in the study of the Mayan civilization, for it would be the key which would unlock the closed door of understanding which has blocked scientists for so many centuries and would be the means of settling the great mysteries in regard to this little known race. For there is no doubt that they have written somewhere in their hieroglyphics the story of their origin, whence they came, how many centuries they wandered, and in which century they settled these crumbling piles, which are the only monuments at present attesting the fact that there did exist the Maya race several centuries ago.

We know that the Mayas occupied Yucatan, the Isthmus of Tehuantepec and parts of Guatemala and northern Honduras centuries before that wild band of warlike rovers, who later were called Aztecs, invaded the valley where Mexico City now stands, conquered the people already established in the valley and adopted their civilization. The race which the Aztecs found were probably Mayas, who had lived there no one knows how many centuries

Ancient Mayas Like Assyrian Kings.

The constant recurrence of architectural methods, designs, pottery, customs and physical appearance similar to Hindu, Chinese and even Assyrian civilization is beginning to make an impression on archaeologists, and they are wondering if their explanation that these similarities are coincidences is a true one. There were at one time without any doubt a large number of records in Tuloom, which would be invaluable could they be discovered. The constant appearance in the older mounds in Honduras of painted pottery bearing portraits of kings with rope like beards, small round crowns and other characteristics &c. like the pictures of Assyrian monarchs is too near being of Asiatic influence to be passed off as a mere coincidence.

Even to-day there are certain small tribes of Indians in Central America, and especially in Honduras, whose appearance, both in face and body, is decidedly Oriental, and who, except for their language, are practically Japanese. From the ruins of Copan, in Honduras, we have a date which refers to some event which took place around 1900 B C. To what this date refers, or what was the development of the Mayan civilization 3,900 years ago, one can only conjecture. What is needed most at present is some ancient Maya manuscript or codex that, by enabling archaeologists to read the hieroglyphics, will lift the curtain behind which the history of Mayan art, civilization and origin is hidden.

Tuloom's date of foundation is lost in the mists of antiquity, and the first mention we have of it in history is in the memoirs of Bernal Diaz, the priest accompanying the expedition under the command of the Spaniard, Grijalva, who, after leaving what is now called Ascension Bay, which he mentions as being large enough to harbor all the ships of Spain, sailed north, passing a large, white city, which stretched for some distance along the coast. The inhabitants of the city thronged to the beach and signalled to Grijalva with banners to come ashore, but he did not tarry, for what reason he does not say, which, judging from the ill repute of the modern Mayas, was a lucky thing for him.

This part of the coast is high and rocky, with the surf dashing against the foot of the lofty promonotory, the white breakers on the coral reefs making a pretty contrast with the light, bluish green of the water. The ancient city made quite an impression on the Spanish explorer, who says that his native city of Seville would not have made a larger or better appearance.

The white towers noticed by the Spanish explorer are still to be seen, the principal one known to-day by the name of the Castillo Grijalva was able to see only that part of Tuloom which was strung along the coast, the section toward the interior being hidden by the high, rocky shores, so that if he were so impressed with the size of ancient Tuloom that he said it was as large as Seville, which at that time (early in the sixteenth century) had a population of 75,000 to 80,000, what would he have thought if he could have seen the rest of the city, which lay back from the coast, the ruins of which, even to this day, extend into the interior for five or six miles.

A question which naturally arises in the mind of the reader is: What has become of all the people who inhabited this region for a couple of centuries at least after the coming of the Spaniards?

How Did 40,000,000 Mayas Vanish?

In the first place, the abundance of water has greatly decreased since the peninsula of Yucatan was the theatre of Mayan activities.

Secondly, there are legends of a great plague which swept over the country, wiping out whole villages and killing people by tens and hundreds of thousands. The third great cause of dissemination and destruction of the Mayan race was tribal wars, that curse of all American aborigines. It is well known that the cruelty, oppression and fiendish brutality of the early Mayan kings often drove the people to revolt, and by internecine civil and tribal wars, which were incessant among the early Mayas, we know that many thousand souls were slaughtered to satisfy the whim of some bloodthirsty monarch. Towns were raided, the men killed, the women and other things which were considered of value were stolen, and the devastated cities were abandoned to lizards and poisonous reptiles that soon themselves on painted walls and carved altars, where formerly Indian maidens gave up their lives to propitiate the Mayan gods, who were as cruel and atrociously bloodthirsty as the people who worshipped them.

Tuloom, situated far to the south of the zone of Spanish influence, remained untouched and unvisited by white men until 1842, when John Stephens, completing his famous trip through Central America and Yucatan, stopped at Tuloom for a couple of days, where he sketched and measured some of the buildings. At that time the immediate vicinity of the deserted city contained no Maya Indians, and that entire coast was deserted, except for an occasional solitary fisherman. In later years the war of extermination carried on by the Mexican Government against the Mayas has reduced the territory occupied by the Indians to a small strip of impassable jungle, comprising the larger part of the section called Quintana Roo, in the middle of which lies Tuloom.

One of the favorite out-door sports of the Mayas is bull fighting, with some poor devil of a white man whom they have captured in the stellar role of the bull. The Indians go through all the ceremony of a real bull fight, sticking rosettes and banderillos in the captive's back until he is sufficiently infuriated to attack the Indians. Then when, crazed by pain, the prisoner throws himself at his tormentors, the Mayas stand off with machetes and carve small pieces from different parts of his anatomy, but never thrusting deep enough to kill, for they have in store for him other and keener games, which delight the Maya maidens, who stand in admiring circles, applauding the skill of their braves in avoiding the rushes of the tormented white man, or in deftly slicing off an ear without touching the head.

There is a tree in that land called by the Indians "checke," which hides beneath its outer bark a sap that is tremendously caustic. The bark is peeled off, the captive is stripped and his naked body tied against the tree, where the burning sap can run out onto the bare flesh of the poor unfortunate, who is the famous Castillo, ... which the town got its name—[illegible] in the Mayan language means castle—and we went ashore at once. The ruins are about in the same condition as when Stephens visited them, the entire region being so overgrown with dense tropical growth that we passed within ten feet of ruins and did not see them. Most of the growth is a scrubby palm, the leaves of which are just the right height from the ground to prevent one from seeing anything in any direction

Strange Deserted Tuloom.

The main part of the principal building, the Castillo, is in a good state of preservation though the two wings are roofless, and their interiors filled up with the rubbish which has fallen inside, and from which grow thorny vines and the stumpy palm of the region The main building, with its broad staircase and high tower, is intact, and could be used now as a place of residence. The lintels of the doors are of zapote wood, which though placed there no one knows how many centuries ago, are still in a good state of preservation. There are only two other buildings within the walls which have their roofs intact

One a few yards to the north, set on a pyramid twenty feet high, has its walls covered inside and out with paintings which, considering their age, are in an excellent state of preservation. The other, occupying the same position to the south of the Castillo as the Painted Temple, is surrounded by huge piles of fallen walls and palms, so that nothing can be made of them without a great deal of excavation and clearing. The building, which is not rich in decoration, is raised from the ground on a low platform, and if cleaned so that it might be studied, holds much of archeological interest. The pyramid in front of the Castillo mentioned by Stephens is still in good condition, and because of the fact that it never had a building on top, seems to point it out as a sort of rostrum, whence the Mayan priests and kings addressed the people. To the west of the pyramid is a building which, after the Castillo, is the most interesting of Tuloom, and which was the most ornate of any. It is in a very ruined condition, however, and would require many days of study.

The first day ashore nearly all the buildings within the enclosure were visited, and when night came our shore party, which consisted of Dr Howe, myself and two Mexican sailors, returned to the sloop without having seen anything of the Mayas That night we saw signal fires about a mile up the beach, where there was a small encampment of Maya braves with their squaws, turning turtles and hunting eggs

Early the next morning, when the first boatload of mozos touched the beach I saw the Maya lookout in the Castillo raise a flag as a signal to his friends in the bush that the men had landed. Believing that the hunting party, hampered with their squaws, would not attack us, and being most anxious to see what remained to be seen in Tuloom, we did not let the Indians' signal deter us, but went ashore at once, and made a circuit of the great wall surrounding this group of temples, which was the ancient Mayan holy of holies The wall is in the form of a rectangle more than a mile in length, and is built of rough stones, so carefully set one on top of the other, without cement of any kind, that it has endured till the present day in excellent condition, practically intact except on the southern end nearest the sea, where a few yards of it have fallen. Of the five gates only four remain. They are low and narrow, and were covered with large slabs of stone. The wall, which is in some places thirty feet high and from eight to fifteen feet thick, made the enclosure practically impregnable against the assaults of the ancient tribes which attacked it. The outside of the wall is smooth and steep, scalable only with ladders, which the thousands of defenders within the walls could easily throw down.

Exciting Experience of Harvard Explorers.

After passing the cenote of brackish water near the northeast corner of the wall and the ruined temple directly over it, we continued to the edge of the cliff, whence looking back from the high ground a good view of the land to the interior could be had. Scattered through the bush inside and outside the wall are other ruined buildings, so overgrown with tropical vegetation that it would take months of work to put them in a condition to be examined and studied. Along the coast to the northward are other towers, and for five or six miles in the interior are ruined buildings which have never been visited by whites. Those outside the walls were evidently of minor importance, and only the principal temples within the enclosure were protected from the momentary attacks of the other tribes.

On looking toward the interior, we saw a flag about two miles inland on a hill, from the top of which the inhabitants of the Maya town some five miles from the coast could see the signals of their brothers on the beach. This signal was to tell the villagers that there were more men needed on the shore, and having with us but two rifles (the only other having been left in the tender, in order to prevent the Mayas from swooping down on the solitary boatman and cutting off all means of retreat), we thought it better to return to the sloop; for although it was anchored but a hundred yards from the beach, the waters along that coast are so infested with sharks that swimming would be a rather uncertain means of reaching the decks of the little boat

Unsolved Puzzles of Mayan Art.

While making a sketch of a wall painting on one of the temples, which is on top of a terrace twenty-five feet above the ground, I heard a couple of Indians moving around in the thick bush, and they were now following us, concealed behind the dense screen of the tropical jungle. Sketches and photos were quickly made, and the mozos were sent off in the first boat to the ship (the tender being too small to take the whole party through the surf), while Dr. Howe, myself and one mozo waited on the beach with a good deal of uneasiness for the return of the tender, expecting at any moment to hear the sound of shots from the thick bush a few yards to the rear. The Indians from the village, however, did not arrive in time, and the other Mayas not daring to attack, we were allowed to leave without molestation

The interesting pictures of Mayan and Mexican antiquities shown on this page are all more or less puzzles. Perhaps the most remarkable work of Mayan art is the great vase found at Chama. It is painted with remarkable skill. One high authority says that the drawing on the vase represents a cruel human sacrifice.

On the other hand, an equally high authority says that this drawing represents a friendly meeting between two kings.

Very curious is the frequent appearance of the bat god in the Maya paintings. He seems to be the god of death, the devourer of life We expect to learn more about the position of this extraordinary deity in Mayan civilization

They also strip the skin from the soles of the feet, and make the captive run through the jungles or over hot sands and rocks, and when he falls from exhaustion, they beat him until, unable longer to endure the pain, he rises, runs a short distance and falls as "These are but a few of the atrocities, many of them unmentionable, committed by the Mayas on all prisoners who fall into their hands, and when the worn-out body can no longer give them sport, it is tied to a stake and burned, or chopped to pieces bits by little until some vital spot is reached, and the victim is at last freed from all earthly pains. The body is then literally hacked to pieces, and the bits of meat gathered together and left in some spot where the Government troops can see it in passing, and know how the Mayas treat their prisoners, and that their retaliation is a thousand-fold worse than the punishment inflicted by Mexicans

Our expedition under Dr. Howe, which went to Tuloom to see if there was anything left of the wonderful lost city mentioned by Gallaiva and Stephens, met with great resistance on the part of the Mexican officials, who refused to clear our ship for any part of the coast near Tuloom, because, they said, we would surely be wiped out, and the United States would then claim an indemnity. Finally, after long, persuasive arguments, we, with ten sailors from the island of Cozumel, were permitted to leave with the warning that if we were killed our deaths would be on our own heads

German Soldiers—Clothes Lined with the New Fabric—Going Through Military Evolutions in Deep Water.

A German Scientist Invents a New Cloth---You Can Sew It Inside a Dress Suit---That Just Won't Let You Drown

THE German War Office is testing a wonderful new fabric invented by a Berlin scientist, the purpose of which is to prevent any one from sinking in the water.

Recently at Treptow, on the River Spree, near Berlin, a soldier of the German Transport Corps, was ordered to test the invention in the deepest part of the stream—twenty feet. The soldier could not swim. The fabric was sewed into the lining of his uniform. The trooper walked into the water in full equipment, helmet, gun and knapsack. Equipment weighed 77 pounds; the total weight of the soldier was 210 pounds. When the water touched his shoulders he sank no further. The legs propelled him onward. There was no rolling, the simple walking movement of the man progressed upright as though on land. When he reached the deepest part of the river he went through various military exercises, aimed his gun in the position of reconnoitering, held a map in his hands, made sketches and manipulated a telephone receiver, as though informing the guard on shore of the possible appearance of an enemy. These manoeuvres over he walked ashore.

The fabric consists of a fibrous material which can be sewed into coats, jackets, vests, cloaks, bathing suits, dress suits, without injury to the garments and without any inconvenience to the wearer. In fact, the lining is absolutely unnoticeable.

The material is a secret. Its basis seems to be silk or cotton impregnated with a chemical that gives it the fibrous appearance. It is no heavier than cotton. The water sets up some kind of chemical action in the material, which makes it and its owner as unsinkable as ever the invisible cloak of legend made its wearer invisible.

Besides the military test others were made. One experiment consisted in a number of men and women in ordinary clothes, wearing shoes and stockings, but whose garments were lined with the fabric, jumping into the river. They could not sink and moved about with as much freedom as on land. Next two girls in red silk bathing suits jumped into the river. They could not sink. In fact, the lining is absolutely unnoticeable.

Gaby Deslys Says—

GABY DESLYS—Gabrielle-of-the-Lilies—has come from her little theatre Des Capucines in the Boulevard, to reveal herself at the Winter Garden in New York. The revelation begins to-morrow night.

Not long ago a very rich American took Gabrielle-of-the-Lilies out to supper, after the Capucines' curtain had fallen. Gaby liked the rich American. Not long afterward two rich friends of the American said they would like to meet Gaby. He gave them a letter to her, recalling himself to her memory. The two friends took a box at the Capucines and sent the cards and the letter from their friend, with an enormous bunch of orchids, in to Gaby, expressing their desire to take her to supper.

Back came a nicely written letter from her secretary:

"Mlle. Deslys would be charmed to take supper with the two gentlemen. It will cost them fifteen hundred francs, for that is what her time is worth."

Mlle. Deslys receives one of the highest salaries ever paid an artist—eighteen thousand dollars a month. In the eight weeks she expects to be in this country it is estimated that at least two hundred thousand dollars will be paid to see her.

Gaby Deslys's fame is not at all merely that which comes from kings. She is an artist; she represents the fine crest that dances on the top of the Parisian wave; she is sophisticated, chic, groomed to the second, and a product of the boulevards, a true Parisian, with all the frivolity, lightness and wit of the Parisian.

Gaby Deslys says: "You are going to pay at least $2,500 to see me. I am going to tell you frankly what I think of you.

"I am frank—and I am an artist. One music hall proprietor offered me a large bonus to allow myself to be billed as the sweetheart of Manuel, but I would not consent. That the people of different countries and the newspapers have called me the uncrowned Queen of Portugal is none of my doing. I cannot help it if they refer to me in that way, for how can I deny that Manuel loved me better than any other woman?

"It will be a luxury for me to speak as frankly of this country that has bought me for a time as it has been for this country to say what it thought of me. I am going to say just what I please. Maybe you will like it; more likely you won't.

"Beginning next week I am going to write exclusively for this newspaper. If you are going to pay that enormous sum to see me, you will find it more worth while to hear what I have to say!"

$2,500 for a Pair of Shoes

SHOES made of the breast feathers of humming birds are the latest extravagance in footwear, now being exhibited in a London shop, and priced at $2,500 a pair—the highest price known for shoes without diamond or jewel settings.

They are the creation of a Paris shoemaker, who explains that the making of a pair of humming-bird shoes takes six months.

Many humming birds are required to make one pair of shoes, as the tiny breasts must be stitched together to make a kind of cloth of feathers. The effect is very beautiful, the shoe gleaming with tones of reds and golds mingled.

"I make a special form for each of my customers to guarantee a perfect fit," said the manufacturer, "and the first commission I accept from a customer must not be for less than ten pairs of shoes.

"After I have obtained the best fitting form of boot I keep it numbered in my establishment, that at any time I can make a perfectly-fitting boot or shoe to send to my customer, in whatever part of the world he or she may be."

My Secrets of Beauty

No. 143—Your Beauty Sleep

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri, the Most Famous Living Beauty.

THAT important topic, especially to dwellers in large cities and to the overworked dweller anywhere, sleep, is treated by Mme. Cavalieri to-day with even more than her usual union of common sense and scientific knowledge.

She dwells in a long, yet interesting chapter, on the preliminaries of sleep, telling her readers how to secure sound, rejuvenating, life lengthening sleep, by preparing for it.

"Rubbing the forehead with long strokes toward the temple has often brought sleep to the nervous."

Mme. Lina Cavalieri.

"The nasal passages should be cleared, so that free breathing for the night is assured."

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri.

MY views are a shade old fashioned in regard to sleep. But of this I am not ashamed for some of the old views in regard to health and beauty are the soundest.

I believe, for instance, that it is well to sleep while it is dark and work while it is light. That is the law of life. It is true that the beauty sleep is that which we get the early part of the night preferably before midnight. The basis of truth in this saying is that it is the sleep we get while we are tired, that is the first lap of rest from labor that refreshes and so tones, as it were, the system.

One person in five hundred takes as much sleep. The others take it needlessly enough. There is too little regard done for either health or beauty, or for mental growth and well being. I cannot say to you, "sleep seven hours," and to you, "sleep nine." You must decide for yourself how much sleep you need in order to awake refreshed, and to feel strong and so to speak, well set up for the day. And having discovered this take it at whatever cost. For sleeplessness is one of the three greatest foes of beauty.

There is a right way to prepare for sleep. The mind should be cleared of worries and of haunting thoughts and the body should be cleansed by a warm bath either in the tub or by a sponge or wash cloth. The throat should be gargled and the nostrils cleansed of any obstructions so that free breathing for the night is assured. Many use the atomizer with mild borax water or salt water for that purpose. There should be no violent exercise before retiring; no eating of heavy foods and no hard mental labor. Nor should there be any excited conversation. If it is necessary to quarrel do your quarreling in the morning so that as the wonderful old Book says the sun shall not set on your wrath. Besides being good counsel from a moral standpoint this is most excellent beauty advice. From the woman who yields often to anger beauty soon vanishes. If you have not eaten for several hours before retiring a cup of warm milk will refresh the stomach and draw the excess of blood from the brain, permitting sleep.

Sleep when you feel like it. There is a possibility of over regularity in sleep. If you feel drowsy don't battle with that sensation. Yield to it even though it be at midday, and if at all possible get a short nap at least. If you combat this tendency and finally conquer it nature is liable to wreak retribution by keeping you awake later on when you need sleep by causing you to feel nervous and overwrought without craving sleep. Late hours are one of the chief causes of wrinkles.

Disrobe slowly. Turn all your underwear wrong side out and hang it near the open window, where it will be well aired. Wear light night clothes. I have been told that those men and women of superb physique the Russian dancers, wear none. They do this that their bodies may secure the ventilation they do not get in their closely fitted clothing of the day. This is hygienic in the sense of ventilation. It is probable, though, that persons of frail physique might contract heavy colds, even pneumonia, in this way.

Sleep in a bed that stands north and south or north-northeast or south-southwest, to meet earth currents of electricity, which will impart their strength to the body. Do not sleep on too soft a bed. I prefer a medium mattress to a very thick one, and I loathe that abomination, the featherbed. Don't sleep under too heavy bedclothing. That is weakening. For this reason I prefer comfortables or interlined spreads to blankets, one pair of blankets with extra spreads being enough no matter what the weather. Keep rolled or folded at the foot of your bed a comfortable for emergency, as when it turns suddenly cold at night, or when there is extra moisture in the air from a new snow or rainfall.

Do not go to bed between sheets that seem damp or not fresh. That condition shows that they have not been properly aired or sunned.

Don't try to read yourself to sleep. It strains the eyes and is quite as likely to overstimulate the brain and keep you awake as to soothe you to sleep. I prefer to sleep on the right side. It relaxes the body and prevents the pressure upon the heart, as when lying on the left side. Sleeping on the back is restful to the muscles, but in many causes nightmares. Try to have a current of air in your room. For that reason it is well to have a room with at least two windows. Keep the windows open at top and bottom two inches each at least, for a free current of air. It is well to do this in the coldest weather, rolling a woolen cloth or putting up a short screen before the lower part of the window to scatter the "draft."

Snoring has several causes. If you are so troubled avoid sleeping on the back. Or it may be your snoring is caused by catarrh. In that case have it treated and, if possible, cured.

If you are affected with sleeplessness some of these precautions or remedies should banish the trouble.

Undress in the dark. Light is a nerve stimulant, and if this stimulant is removed for twenty minutes or more the nerves are surprisingly rested.

Dipping the fingers into cold water and massaging the forehead with them rubbing with long strokes toward the temples and then back again until the tips of the fingers meet at the middle of the forehead, is a soothing exercise that has often brought sleep to the nervous.

A survival of the Kneipp cure, still practised for sleeplessness, is to dip a sheet into cold water, wring it out, wrap it tightly around the body under the arms. Then cover the body with several blankets. This cold pack or vapor cure has relieved many of insomnia, but I recommend it only to those who promise to first secure their physician's approval.

If sleep resists these efforts resort to the Delsartean method of devitalizing, that is ridding yourself of the excess of vitality that has kept you awake. First shake the fingers as though you would loose them from their joints. Then turn the wrists from right to left and back again. Bend the arms at the shoulder joints, moving them up and down. Swing the arms round and round at the shoulders. Twist the legs round and round from the upper joint, swinging the leg solely. Do the same with the lower leg from the knee. Even the toes can thus be flexed. The result of this unloosening the joints seems to be an untiring of the nerves. It seems an opening of the gates of the being for the entrance of sleep.

The Care of House Plants—No. 3

By M. B. Gleason.

POOR drainage is the most frequent cause of plant disease. If the water is retained under the earth soon becomes sour and the result is diseased roots. All pots should receive a layer of broken potters or large pebbles for an inch or an inch and a half before the soil is put in. This is an added precaution if it were to place over the broken crockery bits of flower pots a layer of charcoal broken into pieces about the size of a hazel nut. Treated in this way there is little likelihood of the soil becoming sour unless the pot is placed in a jardiniere where there is no chance of an escape of the surplus water.

The red spider, though very tiny, is very destructive to plants, particularly to palms. It delights in a hot, dry atmosphere, hence moisture is the weapon to use against the pest. Spray with the hand-atomizer daily and shower often.

Scale, mealy-bug and aphis are other enemys to look out for. Scale is a flat insect that attaches itself to the leaves usually on the underside, and looks like a small brownish spot. Mealy-bug is a white cottony-looking parasite that makes a home for itself in the rough places of the stalk and includes in the list of its bugs so frequently found on plants.

The most effective insecticide is a solution of ivory soap. Melt about two ounces of shaved ivory soap and add it to a pailful of water and wash the plant in it, thoroughly, being sure that all of the leaves and stems are wet, until there is no more trouble. It may need more than one application, but it will do the work in perfectly safe and will not injure the plants in the least.

If, for some particular reason, tobacco fumigating is preferred, an easy way to accomplish this is to put the plant in a stationary laundry tub that has a tight-fitting cover. Place a vessel containing some live coals beside the pot and sprinkle tobacco thickly over the coals. Close down the lid quickly, cover with newspapers and a heavy rug to make as airtight as possible, and leave the plant in the tub for one hour or two.

DANCING FOR HEALTH

"The Plier"—Keep the Heels Firmly on the Floor While Crouching Until the Haunches Rest on the Calves

Your Lesson in Health--No. 7

THE illustrations and accompanying descriptions of exercises printed on this page are a continuation of the "Dancing for Health" lessons especially prepared for readers of this newspaper by Mikail Mordkin, of the Imperial Russian Ballet, and who is undoubtedly the greatest male dancer living.

Wherever Mordkin appears in public manifestations of his art he is also observed to be the exponent of perfect symmetrical physical development hence another of his poetic titles, "A Greek God Come to Life" He declares that he is indebted wholly to the exercise of dancing for the strength, symmetry and grace of his body, and therefore advises every one seeking those qualities to practise the movements and poses required to make a first-class dancer.

Mordkin is shortly to return to this country for another transcontinental tour. He will be at the head of the biggest ballet ever seen outside the Imperial Opera Houses of St. Petersburg and Moscow, under the management of Max Robinoff, the Russian impresario.

Now an essential feature of the plier is that the heels shall remain on the floor. The knees may bend but keep as far apart as possible and down so that the muscles of the inner thighs, the calves and the ankles will be exercised. The position of the ankle is just like the full extension of the instep exercise, except that the heels are not to take the place of the toes. One hand gripped on a chair or the back of a chair or the edge of a bureau. In all properly equipped gymnasiums there is a long bar which comes about to the waist, runs along the wall.

The picture marked "Plier" shows me about to take the bend from the position. Not difficult for a supple person, of course, I find it necessary to raise the heels from all positions without holding to the bar but the beginner should grip something with one hand or the other, preferably changing hands for the plier in different feet positions. Holding on to the bar, or other support, enables the beginner to acquire control.

In taking the plier, always, of course, keep the head erect and the shoulders squared.

The elevation is nothing more nor less than rising on the toes It is an "Irish bull" to say, of course, that the matter of heels on the floor, applicable to the plier, does not concern the elevation, which in itself is lifting the heels. The picture marked "Plier" also illustrates the position from which one takes the second.

The French "grand battement" means simply, "great beating." The plain English of it is "high kick." This is of course more of a feminine exercise than a masculine. But the muscles developed by practising the grand battement, gives them an all around development that no woman or girl could. Women are usually so much more graceful than men because they keep up the muscles which allow the grand battement. A person who performs the grand battement can walk with a graceful swinging step and of course has a fine carriage.

For the kind of physical development that readers of these articles may wish to attain the grand battements are for some time taken from the position of the weight in the plier. Remember to keep the leg stiff not rigid. Kick from, back and side with both legs after a time.

The picture marked "Ronde de jambe" shows me in an exercise which leads up to the "circle of the leg." For the ronde de jambe as in the first position and keeping the body stiff, swing the leg around in a circle, as a minute clock. Do the same with both legs, each with the body in front and then at each side. This is expert and all beginners must first learn the grand battement, which is a test of suppleness, which lends to the exercises from taking the pupil to such as the grands battements, too, without support.

In all the exercises I have outlined, remember that you must be graceful. Think about the muscles that you are using. For the psychologists will tell you that the greatest benefits are derived when we set our minds on developing the muscles we call into play.

The "arabesque" illustrates a difficult position which only great training will permit But keep at it Take the exercises regularly

You will learn to like them When you have trained the muscles you will find your self able to dance, and, uniting all the exercises into a graceful harmony

I have purposely left much to the reader's imagination in this second article If you are really interested in learning to dance or are just in gaining the physical benefits of the exercises, it is not necessary that I work out and number for you each and every movement. I have explained the cardinal exercises It will be easy enough for you to go through the different divisions.

"Ronde de Jambe"—Elevate the Leg from This Position to the Horizontal, and Describe a Circle with the Other Foot for a Pivot.

"Grand Battement"—Or the High Kick, Raising the Arms Before the Kick.

By Mikail Mordkin

ALL great dancers are graceful. In fact their cardinal law is: Be graceful! In being graceful the dancer is superior to another person who may have good physical development, but no control. Then many men and women have one set or several sets of muscles developed at the expense of others. Their physical development is inharmonious.

It would be the most natural thing in the world for a dancer, whose legs are his living, to strengthen and train the muscles of the lower limbs and let the arms go.

A mediocre dancer can be judged by the arms. They may master the control of the legs, but they are not able to move gracefully with the arms and the upper part of the body. It is in the control of the arms and the body that the Russian school of dancing is superior to all others The Russian system of exercise develops and trains the whole body in grace and symmetry and accord I am exercising that I am here out lining to you how to bring all the muscles of the body into proper play

In order that every tendon and sinew in the leg throughout its length may be brought into action it is necessary that the feet be placed in several different positions before one takes exercises such as the plier" (the French term for bending) or the elevation (which means in English just what it does in French)

To do "the plier" is exceedingly difficult, but patience in training the muscles so that this exercise can readily be taken is rewarded by the knowledge that all the muscles of the legs and thighs are brought into strengthening action.

To Learn the Effects of Oatmeal

Every year we spend large sums of money to gather facts about oatmeal. We visit thousands of homes which breed the wan and anemic, and thousands which breed the red-cheeked and the strong.

We canvass physicians, food experts and scientists. We talk with those who teach the underfed. All to show others, in some indelible way, how vital is the need for oats.

Now, in the same cause, we ask letters from the people who have seen the effects of oats. We seek actual examples of what has been done, largely through oatmeal diet. No letters or names will be published. But the facts, when impressive and valuable, will be carried to millions of people.

To garner these facts we offer these prizes. We shall pay them for letters which our judges regard as most helpful to people in general.

The contest will close December 1, 1911. Soon after that date the names of the winners will be sent to every contestant. And the 185 people whose letters win prizes will each be sent our check.

Facts Now Known

Oats contain more digestible protein, more organic phosphorus, more lecithin than any other grain that grows.

Protein is the body builder, the endurance food. Woodsmen, for instance, who are fed scientifically are now largely fed on oats.

Phosphorus is the brain's main constituent. Brain workers and students need an abundance of it. Nine-tenths of all college professors regularly eat oatmeal. And seven-eighths of the homes among the highly intelligent supply it to growing children.

So for body, brain and nerves—all three—no other cereal can compare with oats.

For the	5 best letters,	$100 each	$500.00
For the	10 next best,	50 each	500.00
For the	20 next best,	25 each	500.00
For the	50 next best,	10 each	500.00
For the	100 next best,	5 each	500.00
	185 separate prizes, totaling		$2,500.00

The Energy Food

As energy food oatmeal is pre-eminent. To "feel one's oats" always signifies vigor. With people, as with horses, oats give vim and vitality. An extract of oats is now employed as a tonic.

Two world-famous scientists seem to have proved that oatmeal wards off age by feeding the thyroid gland. Experiments on animals seem to prove that care of this gland can vastly lessen one's apparent age.

The love of oatmeal, which is almost universal, also shows the need for oats. It is the call of Nature for the elements required.

Facts Now Wanted

We now want facts and incidents which illustrate these effects. We want examples showing how children thrive on oats. We want reports on how oatmeal has multiplied vitality. We want letters from people whom oatmeal has kept young. From food experts and scientists we ask new facts about oats. We shall award the prizes for the facts and reports most valuable to others.

Address all letters to The Quaker Oats Company, Contest Department, Chicago, Ill.

Quaker Oats

The worth of oatmeal depends on the quality of oats. Its taste depends on the mode of preparation. The oats used in Quaker Oats are selected by 62 separate siftings. We get but ten pounds from a bushel—just the rich, plump, luscious grains. When these choice grains are prepared by our process they form the finest oat food in existence. Yet it costs but one-half cent per dish.

In the consideration of any advertising medium, therefore, it is essential that the advertiser know to what extent any publication in which he buys space can influence the public at large, and whether or not that public is so located that it can be served by him with profit.

This AMERICAN SUNDAY (Monthly) MAGAZINE SECTION is distributed with the New York American, Boston American, Chicago Examiner, San Francisco Examiner and the Los Angeles Examiner into more than 2,000,000 homes each Sunday—a greater quantity of circulation in the profitable areas of merchandising than can be secured through any one other publication.

Now it is reasonable to believe that a publication which regularly reaches a greater number of readers than any one other publication would in an advertising sense wield a stronger influence with those readers than any other publication. And it does

Each of these seventy advertisers paid $5.00 per line, or $70 an inch, for the space his advertisement occupies.

Each of these seventy advertisers bought the space used by him only after he had been convinced by substantial proof that the AMERICAN SUNDAY (Monthly) MAGAZINE can, through these more than 2,000,000 homes it influences, create a consumer demand, at a profit to his dealer and to himself.

Now, there are many more than seventy National advertisers whom the AMERICAN SUNDAY (Monthly) MAGAZINE can serve with profit. It is these advertisers who should closely listen to and investigate the advertising story of this great popular periodical.
